IRELAND.

To Mrs. Clement Shorter.

Si oblitus fuero tui Ierusalem : oblivioni detur dextera mea.

THY sorrow, and the sorrow of the sea,
Are sisters ; the sad winds are of thy race :
The heart of melancholy beats in thee,
And the lamenting spirit haunts thy face,
Mournful and mighty Mother ! who art kin
    To the ancient earth's first woe,
When holy Angels wept, beholding sin.
For not in penance do thy true tears flow,
Not thine the long transgression : at thy name,
    We sorrow not with shame,
But proudly : for thy soul is as the snow.

Old as the sorrow for lost Paradise
Seems thine old sorrow : thou in the mild West,
Who wouldst thy children upon earth suffice
For Paradise, and pure Hesperian rest ;
Had not the violent and bitter fates
    Burned up with fiery feet
The greenness of thy pastures ; had not hates,
Envies, and desolations, with fierce heat
Wasted thee, and consumed the land of grace,
    Beauty's abiding place ;
And vexed with agony bright joy's retreat.

Swift at the word of the Eternal Will,
Upon thee the malign armed Angels came.
Flame was their winging, flame that laps thee still ;
And in the anger of their eyes was flame.

One was the Angel of the field of blood,
And one of lonelier death :
One saddened exiles on the ocean flood,
And famine followed on another's breath.
Angels of evil, with incessant sword,
Smote thee, O land adored !
And yet smite : for the Will of God so saith.

A severing and sundering they wrought,
A rending of the soul. They turned to tears
The laughter of thy waters : and they brought,
To sow upon thy fields, quick seed of fears ;
That brother should hate brother, and one roof
Shelter unkindly hearts ;
Friend from his ancient friendship hold aloof,
And comrades learn to play sad alien parts ;
Province from noble province dwell estranged,
And all old trusts be changed ;
And treason teach true men her impious arts.

But yet in their reluctant hands they bore
Laurel, and palm, and crown, and bay : an host,
Heartened by wrath and sorrow more and more,
Strove ever, giving up the mighty ghost ;
The field well fought, the song well sung, for sake,
Mother ! of thee alone :
Sorrow and wrath bade deathless courage wake,
And struck from burning harps a deathless tone.
With palm and laurel won, with crown and bay,
Went proudly down death's way.
Children of Ireland, to their deathless throne.

Proud and sweet habitation of thy dead !
Throne upon throne, its thrones of sorrow filled ;
Prince on prince coming with triumphant tread,
All passion, save the love of Ireland, stilled.
By the forgetful waters they forget
Not thee, O Inisfail !

Upon thy fields their dreaming eyes are set,
They hear thy winds call ever through each vale.
Visions of victory exalt and thrill

    Their hearts' whole hunger still:
High beats their longing for the living Gael.

Sarsfield is sad there with his last desire ;
FitzGerald mourns with Emmet; ancient chiefs
Dream on their saffron-mantled hosts, afire
Against the givers of their Mother's griefs.

Was it for nought, captain asks captain old,

Was it in vain, we fell ?

*Shall we have fallen like the leaves of gold,
And no green spring wake from the long dark spell ?*

Shall never a crown of summer fruitage come

From blood of martyrdom ?

Yet to our faith will we not say farewell !

There the white soul of Davis, there the worn,
Waste soul of Mangan, there the surging soul
Of Grattan, hunger for thy promised morn :

There the great legion of thy martyr roll,
Filled with the fames of seven hundred years,

    Hunger to hear the voice,

Sweeter than marriage music in their ears,
That shall bid thee and all thy sons rejoice.

There bide the spirits, who for thee yet burn :

Ab ! might we but return,

And make once more for thee the martyr choice !

No swordsmen are the Christians ! Oisín cried :

O Patrick ! thine is but a little race.

Nay, ancient Oisín ! they have greatly died

In battle glory and with warrior grace.

Signed with the Cross, they conquered and they fell ;

    Sons of the Cross, they stand :

The Prince of Peace loves righteous warfare well,

And loves thine armies, O our Holy Land !

The Lord of Hosts is with thee, and thine eyes
Shall see upon thee rise
His glory, and the blessing of His Hand.

Thou hast no fear : with immemorial pride,
Bright as when Oscar ran the morning glades;
The knightly Fenian hunters at his side,
The sunlight through green leaves glad on their blades;
The heart in thee is full of joyous faith.

Not in the bitter dust
Thou crouchest, heeding what the coward saith:
But, radiant with an everlasting trust,
Hearest thine ancient rivers in their glee
Sing themselves on to sea,
Thy winds make melody: O joy most just!

Nay! we insult thee not with tears, although
With thee we sorrow : not as for one dead
We mourn, for one in the cold earth laid low.
Still is the crown upon thy sovereign head,
Still is the sceptre within thy strong hand,
Still is the kingdom thine:

The armies of thy sons on thy command
Wait, and thy starry eyes through darkness shine.
Tears for the dear and dead! For thee, All hail!
Unconquered Inisfail!
Tears for the lost: thou livest, O divine!

Thou passest not away: the sternest powers
Spoil not all beauty of thy face, nor mar
All peace of thy great heart, O pulse of ours!
The darkest cloud dims thee not all, O star!
Ancient and proud thy sorrows, and their might
That of the murmuring waves:

They hearten us to fight the unceasing fight,
Filled with the grace, that flows from holy graves.
Sons pass away, and thou hast sons as true
To fight the fight anew:
Thy welfare, all the gain their warfare craves.

Sweet Mother! in what marvellous dear ways
Close to thine heart thou keepest all thine own!
Far off, they yet can consecrate their days
To thee, and on the swift winds westward blown,
Send thee the homage of their hearts, their vow
Of one most sacred care;
To thee devote all passionate power, since thou
Vouchsafest them, O land of love! to bear
Sorrow and joy with thee. Each far son thrills
Toward thy blue dreaming hills,
And longs to kiss thy feet upon them, Fair!

If death come swift upon me, it will be Because of the great love I bear the Gael!
So sang upon the separating sea
Columba, while his boat sped out of hail,
And all grew lonely. But some sons thou hast,
Whose is an heavier lot,
Close at thy side: they see thy torment last,
And all their will to help thee helps thee not.
Mother! their grief, to look on thy dear face,
Worn with each weary trace
Of fresh woes, and of old woes unforget!

And yet great spirits ride thy winds: thy ways
Are haunted and enchaunted evermore.
Thy children hear the voices of old days
In music of the sea upon thy shore,
In falling of the waters from thine hills,
In whispers of thy trees:
A glory from the things eternal fills
Their eyes, and at high noon thy people sees
Visions, and wonderful is all the air.
So upon earth they share
Eternity: they learn it at thy knees.

Eternal is our faith in thee: the sun
Shall sooner fall from Heaven, than from our lives

That faith ; and the great stars fade one by one,
Ere fade that light in which thy people strives.
Strong in the everlasting righteousness
Triumphs our faith : the fight
Hath holiest hosts to inspire it and to bless ;
Thy children lift true faces to the light.
Theirs are the visitations from on high,
Voices that call and cry :
Celestial comfort for their deep distress.

Charmed upon waters three, forlorn and cold,
The swans, Children of Lir, endured their doom :
From off their white wings flashed the morning gold,
And round their white wings closed the twilight gloom.
Yet on their stormy weird the Christian bell
Broke, and they stirred with dread :
The Coming of the Saints upon them fell ;
They woke to joy, and found their white wings fled.
And thou, in these last days, shalt thou not hear
A sound of sacred fear ?
God's bells shall ring, and all sad days be dead.

But desolate be the houses of thy foes :
Sorrow encompass them, and vehement wrath
Besiege them : be their hearts cold as the snows :
Let lamentation keen about their path.
The fires of God burn round them, and His night
Lie on their blinded eyes :
And when they call to the Eternal Light,
None shall make answer to their stricken cries.
Mercy and pity shall not know them more :
God shall shut to the door,
And close on them His everlasting skies.

How long ? Justice of Very God ! How long ?
The Isle of Sorrows from of old hath trod
The stony road of unremitting wrong,
The purple winepress of the wrath of God :

Is then the Isle of Destiny indeed
To grief predestinate;
Ever foredoomed to agonize and bleed,
Beneath the scourging of eternal fate?
Yet against hope shall we still hope, and still Beseech the Eternal Will:
Our lives to this one service dedicate.

Ah, tremble into passion, Harp! and sing
War song, O Sword! Fill the fair land, great Twain!
Wake all her heavy heart to triumphing:
To vengeance, and armed trampling of the plain!
And you, white spirits on the mountain wind,
Cry between eve and morn!
Cry, mighty Dead! until the people find
Their souls a furnace of desire and scorn.
Call to the hosting upon Tara, call
The tribes of Eire all:
Trump of the Champions! immemorial Horn!

Shall not the Three Waves thunder for their King,
The Captain of thy people? Shall not streams
Leap from thy mountains' heart, and many a spring
Gladden thy valleys, for the joy of dreams
Fulfilled, for glory of the battle won?
Hast thou no prophet left?
Is all thy Druid wizardry undone,
And thou of thy foreknowledge quite bereft?
Nay! but the power of faith is prophecy,
Vision, and certainty:
Faith, that hath walked the waves, and mountains cleft.

As haunting Tirnanoge within the sea,
So hid within the Eyes of God thy fate
Lies dreaming: and when God shall bid it be,
Ah, then the fair perfection of thy state!
Bravely the gold and silver bells shall chime,
When thou art wed with peace:

Far to the desert of their own sad clime
Shall fly the ill Angels, when God bids them cease.
Thine shall be only a majestic joy, .

No evil can destroy :
The sorrows of thy soul shall have release.

Thy blood of martyrs to the martyrs' Home
Cries from the earth : the altar of high Heaven
Is by their cries besieged and overcome :
The Rainbow Throne and flaming Spirits Seven
Know well the music of that agony,
That surge of a long sigh,
That voice of an unresting misery,
That ardour of anguish unto the Most High.
Thou from thy wronged earth pleadest with the Just,
Whose loving-mercy must
Hear, and command thy death in life to die.

Golden allies are thine, bright souls of Saints,
Glad choirs of intercession for the Gael :
Their flame of prayer ascends, their stream of plaints
Flows to the wounded Feet, for Inisfail.
Victor, the Angel of thy Patrick, pleads ;
Mailed Michael with his sword
Kneels there, the champion of thy bitter needs,
Prince of the shining armies of the Lord :
And there, Star of the Morning and the Sea,
Mary pours prayer for thee :
And unto Mary be thy prayers outpoured.

*O Rose ! O Lily ! O Lady full of grace !
O Mary Mother ! O Mary Maid ! hear thou.
Glory of Angels ! Pity, and turn thy face,
Praying thy Son, even as we pray thee now,
For thy dear sake to set thine Ireland free :
Pray thou thy little Child !
Ah ! who can help her, but in mercy He ?
Pray then, pray thou for Ireland, Mother mild !*

*O Heart of Mary! pray the Sacred Heart :
His, at Whose word depart
Sorrows and hates, home to Hell's waste and wild.*
1894.

JULIAN AT ELEUSIS.

To Edmund Gosse.

THERE lay Eleusis, there : O reverend haunt,
Eleusis, highly favoured ! whom the seas
Crown, that once rang with Salaminian shouts
Upon Eleusis' day, when Asia filled
Athens, and all her coasts : the seas, that once
When crouching Sparta hung in clouds of war
On Deceleia, down their glad tide bare
Thine else forgone processions : till in arms
Came godsped Alcibiades, and brought
Safely thy pomps along thine Holy Way,
Athens' true servant, then ! Thou, who dost lie
From her, the world's chief wonder, separate
By that sweet Sacred Way of roses, lit
With torches tossing in the mystic chace
Through odorous incense clouds ! Eleusis, thou
In majesty, in fearfulness, in awe,
Greater than Delphic or than Delian fanes,
Fallen Solyma, or Rome before false gods
Fallen from that high state, she had ! But thou
Livest among the immortal mysteries,
Though men have lost thy secret. So our road
Was lonelier than the ancient days beheld
Their Eleusinian companies : for once,
Upon the first morn of the nine days' feast,
In Boëdromion beautiful with sheaves,
To Athens flocked the mystics. Then the cry,
Seaward ! Seaward ! O mystics ! bade them wash
From soil and stain in the clear waters ; next,
Together having shared sweet honey cakes,

Wended the first procession, round the car
That bore the basket of symbolic fruits,
Poppy seed with pomegranate : in chaste hands
Followed the sacred arks. On thee they cried,
Demeter! Mother of the fruits of earth!
Yet not by that bland name they hailed thee then :
Lady of Sorrow! Heavy-hearted Queen!
Cried they, remembering thy loneliness,
And lost Persephone. But when night fell,
With faces flashing beneath forest brands,
They sought Persephone along the shores,
While murmured all the sea. Then, chiefest rite,
Lord of the fiery and devouring vine,
Iacchus, myrtle-coronalled, came forth
From Ceramicus : westward charioted
By thunders of a marching multitude,
And clangour of sonorous bronze. Men plead:
Christ hallows poverty, the Gods cared nought.
Nay! rich with poor one company, on foot
Equal procession kept and equal love.
Unto Demeter's temple vast they came,
Past bridge and holy figtree : at midnight,
Through lustral waters purified, they passed
Within the veil ; led by the hierophant,
His body chilled with hemlock, that the fires
Of passion should be hushed, still be his soul.
Without, the hosts of heaven were watching : there,
The dark, that once brooded upon the deep,
Ere any light was, heavy hung : and death,
Mystical death reigned in the vasty air,
And in that world was silence ; save each heart
Trembled, each labouring heart and fearful soul.
Then from the ends of earth, sweeping the seas,
Fields, footless mountain tops, and lonely moors,
Wave upon wave of sound gathered : a moan,
Dreary as the thin voice of a forlorn wind
Through Daphne drifting down, fitful and slow ;
Soon swelling to the full voice of a sea

Roaring beneath wild winds; till on their fear,
With apparition of the Sacred Corn
And awfulness of imaged history,
Smote the great storm of sound from vault to floor,
Smote : and resigned again to silent gloom
The air of adoration : mighty deep
Shuddered to deep of darkness, under God.
Then on their eyes fast sealed, their dreading ears,
Thunder with flame broke through the sanctuary :
And through the thunder, voices; through the flame,
Visions : and in the vision and the voice,
God's light, and the whole melody of God.

Not with the glory of such rites have I
Put on the spirit of Eleusis: yet,
A little company although we be,
Ours are the mysteries ; we also mount
With ancient prophets the mysterious way.
Beyond the shadowy threshold and gray bounds
Of purblind life I looked : then I beheld
Death's province peopled proudly ! O great Death,
Imperial, perdurable, Ancient of Days !
O Death, Master of mortals !. But they passed,
His people, through the limits of that realm,
And places purgatorial, till their brows
Shone ; and light fell upon them in fair Fields.
Tellus was there, who by Eleusis died,
And with divine simplicity dethroned
The Lydian's pompous fortune : there he reigned,
Italy's ancient prince, Pythagoras :
And Plato, lost in immortality.

Chance and change; chance and change ! strange chance,
hard change:

These fashion what I know, and mourning know.
Still am I faithful to the lonely faith.
Dreaming, alone and melancholy here,
In Antioch of the Christians ; would I saw

Hymettus now, and purple lights of morn :
Apollo leap above Acropolis,
And strike the shrines with gold! They are not here,
They are not mine, who there of old were mine,
Basil and Nazianzen : mighty tongues,
But mighty against all most dear to me.
A peasant has them captive : and the world,
Rome and the world bow down to Nazareth.
I only serve you, royal Gods! I still :
With body's peril, soul's distress, I still.
Would I had lived at morning of the world!
With music caught down from the Sun rang out
The lyres and chaunts of those rejoicing men :
Apollo was a glory on the heights!
Can his day dawn again? O faith most fair!
I doubt not thee. When these ill days are done,
Glad will the cities be once more, with fires
Of sacrifice, and gleaming forms divine ;
Fair, as the fair perfection signified :
One great civility of Gods and men,
Calm Gods, and men serenely serving them.
Then to Eleusis would I bring again
Her desolate veneration : setting up
Temple and courts, girt with the sacred bay,
With laurel, and the comely olive branch :
And wisdom from the books of stone once more
Should nourish pure souls, and illuminate.
So, from the ruddy desert East, to her,
The bright Parisian city of my care,
Julian should be remembered by the Gods,
Their servant universal. O far dreams !
O far dreams, far beyond these weary eyes !
I shall do nothing : since the first king was,
Wisdom's crowned lover has the world not seen.
Nay! not one sceptred Caesar of them all,
Not grave Aurelius, whom I thought of old
To follow, but has fallen short therein :
Crossed by the grievous troubling of the world.

Yet nothing of your praise have I not paid,
Lords of Olympus! When the great Sun shines,
I am Apollo's priest: hers too I am,
The Mighty Mother, who from land to land
Moves with supreme and battlemented brows.
The robe of her anointing, hangs it not,
Tarnished and worn, upon my shoulder yet;
This robe, still dreadful with the bull's black blood?
The citizens of Antioch scorn my state:
The purple-born, a scholar! the world's king,
Hid in the cloak of sad philosophy.
O servants of a vain and distraught man,
Ill taken for a god: is that your pride?
I, who am Caesar; Caesar's too, these rags;
With a more proud humility disdain,
O Christians! your imperial show and sin;
For I am votarist of Gods, who wore
Man's true flesh never: nor myself have worn
Man's empty shadows of magnificence,
But am the lover of magnificent Gods.
Wondrous Antinous! Oh, fairer thou
Than the dim beauty of Christ crucified;
Thee too among the Everlasting Ones,
With Eleusinian feast, have I adored.
Beneath the vast night in old Egypt thou
Gavest thyself for Hadrian: neither foul,
Nor any slave's death, was thy death; for Nile
Took thee. Then in the heavens burned one more star,
And earth reddened with unknown lily flowers,
O consecrate and fair! for joy of thee.
Now am I votarist of thine, as I
Of each magnificent and marvellous God.

In their high converse only is my trust.
Through the dim German forests have I marched,
Prince of the Roman eagles, Mars my lord,
As in the triumphing days of Rome: Mars grant,
That through these oriental empires Rome

Triumph! And Mars will grant it, even as thou
 Foretellest me great glory, Maximus!
 A golden presage: Julian shall increase,
Till Alexander be less great a name.
 Once with tumultuary voice of power,
August! the Legions hailed me: me they bore,
 In mail and purple, vehemently crowned
 Their monarch, and the world's: who one day yet
 May clash their swords through mine unarmoured breast.
 But none can take from me the treasure: none
 Mine adoration of Divinity.
 Caverns of haunted Ephesus! Your gloom,
 Sweet with the dreamy incense, showed my youth
 Its earliest of mysterious ways: whenceforth,
 Up mounting, brightening, labyrinths I traced
 Mine homeward journey to the eternal Light:
 Till at Eleusis, as I strove to it,
 The perfect benediction fell. And now,
 When the abhorrent voices crowd on me,
 Christian with Christian warring, all with truth,
 Retired within the secret chambers, there
 Eleusis comforts me: I know and live.
 The earth has yet her holy motherhood:
 The earth has honour yet, and honours some,
 True children of her heart, and of the Sun;
 True masters of the mysteries, who walk
 Surely and nobly the vast world, its kings:
 Lords of the laws, that bind the Pleiades,
 And order the outgoings of the morn.
 O kingly prophet of the golden thigh!
 O mighty Samian master! Thy mild hand
 Stroked in Crotona the white eagle: thou
 Wast tamer of man's heart, the wild beast there!
 I too, whom nations through the world revere,
 Nor suffer me from old Lucretius' height
 Contemplate the laborious march of men,
 But draw me downward to their wants: I too
 Salvation through the terrible midnight

Have seen, lapped round with glory. So my soul,
Up to the golden air in welcome death
Passing, shall fall within the calms of God.
Yet not alone : thou too shalt pass with me,
Brother and friend upon that last of ways,
Divinest of all living men : mine own
Lover and counsellor, Iamblichus!
One year shall free us both : one ecstasy
Make thy soul mine, mine thine ; both lost in Light.
1886-7.

DE AMICITIA.

To "A. E."

*BEAUTY of Israel ! thou on its high places
Fallen, wonderful in thy love to me !
King David ! we too love with thee
Dear lovers' faces,
Infinite friendships, golden graces :
Hearts passionate, as the full and stirring sea.
We too have come upon the shining traces
Of white souls, while we walk this darker earth :
Celestial was their birth,
August, and issuing from Uranian races ;
Kin to the morning stars, their choral mirth,
A matin melody.
The glory of a crown, gold tried in fire,
Shadows their brows :
They know it not, but hungering desire
For the White City, in their ardent eyes,
Burns : and the pure palm boughs,
Holy and stately from their clean hands rise :
Such brightness and such bravery shall they win !
*And this of poor souls red with sin,
Who with the darkness house ?
O thought, unkind, unwise !
With perfect faith we look within,

Where the truth lies.
Dew of the morning and the evening falls,
Falls cool and sweet, upon the scarlet flames,
The furnace of each heart :
And through their stormy music, music calls
The wandering children by fond, wistful names,
Dear and apart :
Music with gently pleading claims,
Music descending from glad Sion walls.
Whiter than wool, whiter than snow,
By grace and love, the stained souls grow :
Lilies they stand, who lay so low
In shameful mire of wrong and woe ;
Lilies, to fill the Queen of Heaven's fair halls.
Angels of Mercy gently come and go
Between the Sacred Heart and these poor hearts :
Plying their ministrant strong parts,
With love in overflow.
Ah, friends too dear and goodly to be lost !
Though you be tempest-tost
On bitter surges, raised by envious arts
Of the great Unholy Ghost,
Prince of ill Angels, Captain of Hell's host !
Ah, friends of loving voices, and kind hands,
And eyes, that with all confidence accost
Ours in the silent eloquence of love,
As the heart understands !
Our faith above
Our fear prevails,
Driving it into desolate lands.
You to the very far off Land your sails
Have stoutly set :
Whatever adverse and malignant gales
Make you awhile forget
The straight course, and the ever faithful star,
Constant above the winds and waves and war.
Ah, yet
The Land, where all true lovers are,

Shall greet us with celestial hails :
The Land, that lures us from afar ;
Land of the Love, that never fails,
The Light, that never pales ;
The long, sweet Patience, that allows no let,
Though with disdain her pains be met,
Saying : They shall be yet
The captives of the Everlasting Love !
O gracious voice and unoracular !
Dove's voice indeed, but not Dodona's dove.
Wherefore above
Our fear triumphs our faith,
And saith
No word of dark and comfortless regret.
Ah, dear our friends, ours past the mists of death !
Ours, where the loved disciple, great Saint John,
Pillows his head upon
The only rest,
God's Breast !
Ours, in the strength of that enamoured breath,
Which rang from Patmos' exile guest :
God is Love ! And of all men he knew best,
Who lay upon that Breast,
And heard the beating of the Heart of God :
Who Calvary trod,
And stood,
With Mary in her mourning Motherhood,
Beneath the Rood.
Friends, whose true care for us is our best proof,
From grace and good we keep not quite aloof !
Dear brother and dear brother,
We shall clasp hands beneath the eternal roof,
And see Saint John the Loved with Mary Mother !
Friends ever, as of old :
But there, with joy untold ;
Joy, mightier than our mortal hearts can hold.
But hearts immortal made can never be
Feeble, nor overbold :

Hearts greatly stationed in eternity.
Friends, dear our friends, O fellowship of gold !
By ways of land and sea,
Ways manifold,
Ways marvellous,
Brought near to us !
Since you have found our friendship something worth,
And in our hearts, not a mere dust, nor dearth
Of what your own hearts hold so perfectly,
Courage and constancy :
Bear with us, while we bear the bonds of earth !
Bear with us, for if friendship pine,
Waver and wane,
Not yours, but ours,
Will be the sad fault, the disastrous sign,
Of friendship's drear decline
And drooping flowers :
But you against ourselves will we maintain
Friends without stain,
Of the true line.
Our visions are not vain !
Yours are the crown, the palm, the blessed reign,
The marvellous high strain
Of triumph trumpets blown from Sion walls.
Fair as her lilies you indeed shall stand,
Hand fast in hand,
Along the Queen of Heaven's high halls.
Black wind never yet blew,
Shall whelm and vanquish you
Riding the seas safe homeward to that strand,
Where from of old, though new,
The City of the eternal golden spires,
The valiant City of the Saints, desires
You for her citizens, past seas and fires,
Made white,
Fit for the Angels' and the Saints' delight,
Fit for God's sight.
Amid Seraphic and Uranian quires,

We hear your music celebrate your fight
Well fought, well won :
We know your night
Ended, your everlasting day begun :
We see you splendid in His Living Light,
The Lamb your Sun.
O royal David! we too love, like thee,
Friendship's confederacy :
Friends, than the cedars of Mount Lebanon,
Stronger; than orchards of Isle Avalon,
Fairer : O king ! we love, like thee,
Friends, in their charity,
Wonderful : and we know them God's, each one.
1894.

DAWN OF REVOLUTION.

To Thomas Hardy.

TO-NIGHT, there's music on the air ;
Strange stirring, and rich turbulence :
Hope turned to pride ; crowns for despair ;
Night, and night's vast magnificence.

The flowers are swaying with delight,
And incense burdens the warm wind :
Now is incomparable night !
Stars in the vault, and Heaven behind.

Night hath fierce loveliness : clouds race
Past star and still unconquered star :
While, rivalling their mighty chace,
Rides, reigns, a marvellous moon afar.

What means the night ? Back beats mine heart
Answer : Night teems with prophecy :
And thou ! hast thou fore-bailed thy part,
And played thine own posterity ?

*Praising thy soul of fire, thy sword
Of death, thy death of victory?
Beheld thee on the crimson sward
Slain? Seen the eagles swoop to thee?*

*And turned thee, where thou standest bronze
Above the passing people's praise :
Or liest marble, where the sons
Of men thank God on triumph days?*

The wind witches me ; the hot air
Inflames my brows, and burns my blood :
No vehement love night flames so fair,
No feast of the vine pours such a flood.

Faces are wild before me : steel
Whirls its blue lightning, veined with red.
Palaces tremble down, or reel
To ruin, while the stars in dread

Fade far into their quiet deeps,
Before the deep destroying roar :
Heavenward the costliest incense leaps,
And madness falls from Heaven the more.

Ah, the strained eyes, the frantic hands,
The bloody, racing feet ! Where trod
His priests of sacrifice, now stands
Each gaunt, starved enemy of God.

What is the end ? Nay ! what know I,
With these drums thundering through mine ears,
Through the changed earth, the unchanging sky :
The wreck of immemorial years ?

Liberty ! for the end is come :
The end, that shall begin new earth,

And end the old Heavens : that look down dumb
Upon no second fair, calm birth

Of morning stars in melody,
But the sad birth through bitter stress,
And elemental misery,
Of freedom's newfound righteousness.

But I grow tired in a pause of wind :
The clouds drag, the worn flowers are still.
Courage ! fresh visions troop behind
That gloomiest cloud, that shadowy hill.

There ! from the soft heart of the cloud
Dance forth wild choirs with wantoning hair :
The angels of rebellion, vowed
To pour their passion on the air.

Distraught sublimity of death
Wilders them : Oh, to storm life out,
Destroying life at every breath,
With cry of lust, with battle shout !

Over the vines an heady shower
Sweeps, of enamouring windy rain :
Each shrivelled bough and dusty flower
Loves the swift dew, and lives again.

And falling with the vehement streams,
And welling from the violent springs,
Come virtues with their faery dreams :
Bright eyes, and flash of fiery wings.

O piteous eyes, that long and long
To win one welcoming look from God !
O burning brains, and labouring tongue !
O hands that strain, and feet flame-shod !

You grow dim unto death : you grasp
Never the far off wisdom : you
Find not free words : you never clasp
God's hands : you wander the waste through.

Swept down the flooding terror's path,
Into the night the dreamers go :
On earth abide the men of wrath,
For whose delight the stormwinds blow.

So hot the air still : Oh, that morn
Were on me, and with morning, calm !
These tumults of the night downborne,
And peace upon me for a balm !

Still strong, you visions ! For the strip
Of crawling light below the gloom
Shows like the Pit's unfolding lip :
Menace of fire and hungry doom.

Well I know, truth is in my dream,
With sad and haggard countenance :
Red shafts of sullen sunrise gleam,
And slowly the fierce hours advance.

A DESCANT UPON THE LITANY OF LORETTO.

To Mrs. Meynell.

A FLOOD of chaunted love,
Love white and virginal,
Makes this rich temple gloom more musical,
Than woodland glooms ; where slow winds nightly move
Soft leaves, that rise and fall
Upon the branches of clear nightingales ;
Whose rapture, touched with lovelier sorrow, wails,

And thrills, and thrills,
 Until night fails ;
 And, in the sunrise on the eternal hills,
 The Angels of the Morning stand,
 Blessing with lifted hand
 The labouring land :
 But here the glory of our holy song,
 Sorrowless, flies along
 Reaches of Heaven adoring and adored :
 Where Angels worship ; whither men aspire,
 Wielding their faith, a sword
 Tempered and tried in fire.
 Sorrowless song ! for each predestined pang,
 Of Calvary and Nazareth,
 Changed to a passion of delight, when rang
 An universal breath
 Of salutation over death cast down :
 When upon Mary's brow the crown,
 For all her lowliness, proclaimed her Queen
 Of Heaven and of our woes : she, who had been
 Woe once incarnate, as high God in her.
 Wherefore the pure concent
 Of each fair voice, found fit to minister
 Its music to her ear,
 Floods, with no underflow of doubt and fear,
 This sacred house : while infinite content
 Urges forgetfulness
 Of that, which makes the Angels' rapture less ;
 The passionate countenance,
 Wherewith the Prince of this World still blasphemes
 Against its God, and gleams
 Angrily against Michael's lifted lance,
 Then falls beneath his glance.
 So be not quick to take
 Your death of beauty on this trembling air !
 A little longer yet,
 O voices piercing to the golden stair !
 A little longer, let the world look fair :

A little longer make
 Anguish of heart, a light thing to forget :
 A little longer yet !
 She will not weary of your harmonies,
 'The gentle Mother : for her memories
 Are full of ancient melodies,
 Raised in the fashion of old Israel,
 Beside the cold rock well :
 Under the glow of calm and splendid skies ;
 Jesus upon her breast,
 Fronting the shadowy land, the solemn west.
 Ah, Mother ! whom with many names we name,
 By lore of love, which in our earthly tongue
 Is all too poor, though rich love's heart of flame,
 'To sing thee as thou art, nor leave unsung
 'The greatest of the graces thou hast won,
 'Thy chiefest excellence !
 Ivory Tower ! Star of the Morning ! Rose
 Mystical ! Tower of David, our Defence !
 To thee our music flows,
 Who makest music for us to thy Son.
 So, when the shadows come,
 Laden with all contrivances of fear !
 Ah, Mary ! lead us home,
 Through fear, through fire :
 To where with faithful companies we may hear
 That perfect music, which the love of God,
 Who this dark way once trod,
 Creates among the imperishable choir.

1885.

OUR LADY OF THE MAY.

To the Very Rev. Fr. Vassall, C.S.S.R.

O FLOWER of flowers, our Lady of the May !
 'Thou gavest us the World's one Light of Light :
 Under the stars, amid the snows, He lay ;

While Angels, through the Galilean night
Sang glory and sang peace :
Nor doth their singing cease,
For thou their Queen and He their King sit crowned
Above the stars, above the bitter snows ;
They chaunt to thee the Lily, Him the Rose,
With white Saints kneeling round.
Gone is cold night : thine now are spring and day :
O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !

O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !
Thou gavest us the blessed Christmas mirth :
And now, not snows, but blossoms, light thy way ;
We give thee the fresh flower-time of the earth.
These early flowers we bring,
Are angels of the spring,
Spirits of gracious rain and light and dew.
Nothing so like to thee the whole earth yields,
As these pure children of her vales and fields,
Bright beneath skies of blue.
Hail, Holy Queen ! their fragrant breathings say :
O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !

O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !
Breathe from God's garden of eternal flowers
Blessing, when we thy little children pray :
Let thy soul's grace steal gently over ours.
Send on us dew and rain,
That we may bloom again,
Nor wither in the dry and parching dust.
Lift up our hearts, till with adoring eyes,
O Morning Star ! we hail thee in the skies,
Star of our hope and trust !
Sweet Star, sweet Flower, there bid thy beauty stay :
O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !

O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !
Thou leftest lilies rising from thy tomb :

They shone in stately and serene array,
Immaculate amid death's house of gloom.

Ah, let thy graces be

Sown in our dark hearts ! We

Would make our hearts gardens for thy dear care ;

Watered from wells of Paradise, and sweet

With balm winds flowing from the Mercy Seat,

And full of heavenly air :

While music ever in thy praise should play,

O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !

O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !

Not only for ourselves we plead, God's Flower !

Look on thy blinded children, who still stray,

Lost in this pleasant land, thy chosen Dower !

Send us a perfect spring :

Let faith arise and sing,

And England from her long, cold winter wake.

Mother of Mercy ! turn upon her need

Thine eyes of mercy : be there spring indeed :

So shall thine Angels make

A starrier music, than our hearts can say,

O Flower of flowers, our Lady of the May !

1895.

A DREAM.

To Edgar Jepsen.

AH, you will not hear ! Alone

I must agonize, and keep

Mine own conscience all mine own :

Yet, to sleep the eternal sleep,

Knowing this thing to all unknown !

I shall shudder in the shade

At a fainter shade astir

There, within the gray : some strayed

Melancholy wanderer
Through the misty barricade.

Nought to him were shadowy bounds ;
Nought, his far off resting place,
Where the willowed water rounds
Each dim point with gentle grace,
Filled with windy, willow sounds.

He would lie there in his dream :
Parted lips, and wandering hands
Plucking pale blooms ; down the stream,
Far against the sad, gray lands,
The soft eyes would gaze and gleam.

Ah, so softly ! No more wild,
Than a flame of gracious fire
On the altar : like a child,
Would he play with light desire,
Born of fancy, sweet and mild.

All the willow land to him
But a place of echoes were :
Philomel's melodious hymn,
Flowing through the evening air ;
The wood doves' faint voices dim.

For dull Lethe, for the blind
Poppy of Oblivion,
Hush, and lull, and thrall his mind :
Deeper memories are undone ;
What he would, he cannot find.

Cannot find forthwith : but yet,
As the visions veer and fall,
Rapture now, and now regret :
He will feel it, though not all ;
Half remember, half forget.

Half remember, dreaming ghost,
Her, whose heart I stole to break :
Her, who should have loved him most :
Her, whose soul I laughed to make
Ugly, miserable, lost.

He remembers ! The lone eyes
Wake to fire : the smiling lips
Clench to iron, cold as ice :
Dropped its flowers, the thin hand grips,
Where no venging weapon lies.

This a dreamer in the haunt,
The still haunt, of willow rills !
But a dreamer like to daunt
Death, upon the naked hills
Dight for battle, grim and gaunt !

The gray precincts water-worn
Shiver at a Sundering flame,
On a vehement whirlwind borne
Into the drear home of shame,
From the home of souls lovelorn.

He, love's melancholy saint
Cloistered by the innocent plains
Willow-bowered for true love's plaint !
He, to dare the place of pains :
He, to bear the fiery taint !

Fainter shade, said I ? But nay !
Strong and strenuous with wrath,
Striding toward my dismal day,
He will front me on the path,
Where my tortured feet shall stray.

Then a thunder, then a storm,
Then a light of rousing Gods !

Justice in her haughtier form,
Vengeance with her living rods :
I, with stricken face deform.

There, supreme in Hell's thrilled hall,
He, the angelic challenger !
Hark ! he speaks : Before you all
Come I, your petitioner :
Justice ! Vengeance ! Hear me call :

Love and Death denounce this man !
Silence in the courts of Hell,
Silence for a fearful span :
Such, as ere Gomorrha fell,
And the ruining thunder ran.

I can die. To quit the light,
Hide my misery in gloom,
Well indeed ! But in that night,
At his voice, to meet my doom !
And Death's Angels, who may fight ?
1887.

IN HONOREM B. V. M. DE WINTON
MARTYRUMQUE WICCAMICORUM.

To the Rev. Fr. Lean, O.C.

MARTYRES olim validi,
Fratresque vos Wiccamici !
Coelicolae qui vivitis,
Orate pro Wiccamicis.

Per Fundatoris insciam
Oblivii memoriam :
Date preces pro fratribus,
Ne confundamur ocius.

Saevior vobis erat mors :
At vitae immortalis sors
Vos inter choros posuit,
Quos Deus ipse reficit.

Deliciis fruimini :
Nunc igitur propitii
In valle laborantibus,
Fundite lumen clarius.

Quid valet furor Gentium ?
Cohortes Immortalium
Draconis vincent copias :
Nunquam labavit Veritas.

Et iuventutis memores
Delectat vos segura spes :
Augebitur vis Fidei
Ad voluntatem Wiccami.

Quam dulce nomen consonat
Domus ! Et nostra superat
Domus terrestres caeteras :
O domus dulcis ! floreas.

Quae pariter amavimus :
Mons Catharinae pedibus
Vestris erat amabilis ;
Lapsusque Ichini gracilis.

Vobisque cara claustra sunt,
Sacro quae cantu perstrepunt :
Et coluistis mortuos
Antiquitus Wiccamicos.

Vos autem non Wiccamica,
Sed Urbs coelorum mystica
Perpetuos amplectitur
Cives : et vox exoritur :

Vox Angelorum carmine
Qui Sion stant in limine :
Vos circum adorantes stant,
Et triumphantes celebrant.

Quantus nam ignis vere vos
Fons testabatur aureos !
Quanta nox mortis animas
Inveniebat lucidas !

Per Crucifixi Sanguinem,
Per vitam Matris humilem :
Monstrate Matris gloriam,
Et Crucifixi regiam.

Maria ! nonne Mater es ?
Filios audi supplices :
Misericors in miseros,
Pacis ad vias trahe nos !

Agimus tibi gratias,
Salus et Lux ! gratissimas :
Quae Domum tui nominis
Amore tuo protegis.

Antiquas super ianuas
Etiamnum veneranda stas :
Tuis tui vae ! nesciis
Arx et coelorum Porta sis.

OXFORD.

To Arthur Galton.

OVER, the four long years ! And now there rings
One voice of freedom and regret : Farewell !
Now old remembrance sorrows, and now sings :
But song from sorrow, now, I cannot tell.

City of weathered cloister and worn court ;
Gray city of strong towers and clustering spires :
Where art's fresh loveliness would first resort ;
Where lingering art kindled her latest fires.

Where on all hands, wondrous with ancient grace,
Grace touched with age, rise works of goodliest men :
Next Wykeham's art obtain their splendid place
The zeal of Inigo, the strength of Wren.

Where at each coign of every antique street,
A memory hath taken root in stone :
There, Raleigh shone ; there, toiled Franciscan feet ;
There, Johnson flinched not, but endured, alone.

There, Shelley dreamed his white Platonic dreams ;
There, classic Landor throve on Roman thought ;
There, Addison pursued his quiet themes ;
There, smiled Erasmus, and there, Colet taught.

And there, O memory more sweet than all !
Lived he, whose eyes keep yet our passing light ;
Whose crystal lips Athenian speech recall ;
Who wears Rome's purple with least pride, most right.

That is the Oxford, strong to charm us yet :
Eternal in her beauty and her past.
What, though her soul be vexed ? She can forget
Cares of an hour : only the great things last.

Only the gracious air, only the charm,
And ancient might of true humanities :
These, nor assault of man, nor time, can harm ;
Not these, nor Oxford with her memories.

Together have we walked with willing feet
Gardens of plenteous trees, bowering soft lawn :
Hills, whither Arnold wandered ; and all sweet
June meadows, from the troubling world withdrawn :

Chapels of cedarn fragrance, and rich gloom
Poured from empurpled panes on either hand :
Cool pavements, carved with legends of the tomb ;
Grave haunts, where we might dream, and understand.

Over, the four long years ! And unknown powers
Call to us, going forth upon our way :
Ah ! turn we, and look back upon the towers,
That rose above our lives, and cheered the day.

Proud and serene, against the sky, they gleam :
Proud and secure, upon the earth, they stand :
Our city hath the air of a pure dream,
And hers indeed is an Hesperian land.

Think of her so ! the wonderful, the fair,
The immemorial, and the ever young :
The city, sweet with our forefathers' care ;
The city, where the Muses all have sung.

Ill times may be ; she hath no thought of time :
She reigns beside the waters yet in pride.
Rude voices cry : but in her ears the chime
Of full, sad bells brings back her old springtide.

Like to a queen in pride of place, she wears
The splendour of a crown in Radcliffe's dome.
Well fare she, well ! As perfect beauty fares ;
And those high places, that are beauty's home.

LONDON TOWN.

To Arthur Mackmurdo.

LET others chaunt a country praise,
Fair river walks and meadow ways ;
Dearer to me my sounding days
In London Town :

To me the tumult of the street
Is no less music, than the sweet
Surge of the wind among the wheat,
By dale or down.

Three names mine heart with rapture hails,
With homage: Ireland, Cornwall, Wales:
Lands of lone moor, and mountain gales,
And stormy coast:
Yet London's voice upon the air
Pleads at mine heart, and enters there;
Sometimes I wellnigh love and care
For London most.

Listen upon the ancient hills:
All silence! save the lark, who trills
Through sunlight, save the rippling rills:
There peace may be.
But listen to great London! loud,
As thunder from the purple cloud,
Comes the deep thunder of the crowd,
And heartens me.

O gray, O gloomy skies! What then?
Here is a marvellous world of men;
More wonderful than Rome was, when
The world was Rome!
See the great stream of life flow by!
Here thronging myriads laugh and sigh,
Here rise and fall, here live and die:
In this vast home.

In long array they march toward death,
Armies, with proud or piteous breath:
Forward! the spirit in them saith,
Spirit of life:
Here the triumphant trumpets blow;
Here mourning music sorrows low;

Victors and vanquished, still they go
Forward in strife.

Who will not heed so great a sight?
Greater than marshalled stars of night,
That move to music and with light:

For these are men!
These move to music of the soul;
Passions, that madden or control:
These hunger for a distant goal,
Seen now and then.

Is mine too tragical a strain,
Chaunting a burden full of pain,
And labour, that seems all in vain?

I sing but truth.
Still, many a merry pleasure yet,
To many a merry measure set,
Is ours, who need not to forget
Summer and youth.

Do London birds forget to sing?
Do London trees refuse the spring?
Is London May no pleasant thing?

Let country fields,
To milking maid and shepherd boy,
Give flowers, and song, and bright employ:
Her children also can enjoy,
What London yields.

Gleaming with sunlight, each soft lawn
Lies fragrant beneath dew of dawn;
The spires and towers rise, far withdrawn,

Through golden mist:
At sunset, linger beside Thames:
See now, what radiant lights and flames!
That ruby burns: that purple shames
The amethyst.

Winter was long, and dark, and cold:
Chill rains! grim fogs, black fold on fold,
Round street, and square, and river rolled!

Ah, let it be:

Winter is gone! Soon comes July,
With wafts from hayfields by-and-by:
While in the dingiest courts you spy
Flowers fair to see.

Take heart of grace: and let each hour
Break gently into bloom and flower:
Winter and sorrow have no power
To blight all bloom.

One day, perchance, the sun will see
London's entire felicity:
And all her loyal children be
Clear of all gloom.

A dream? Dreams often dreamed come true:
Our world would seem a world made new
To those, beneath the churchyard yew
Laid long ago!
When we beneath like shadows bide,
Fair London, throned upon Thames' side,
May be our children's children's pride:
And we shall know.

CYHIRAETH.

To F. York Powell.

SUNK and set our sun, that shone:
Now are light and glory gone
From glittering Llanarmon!
We heard the doom, the deathcry, wail
Between the mountains and the vale,
Through desolate Llanarmon.

For a crown, Llanarmon bears
But a bristling crest of spears:
Fierce are thy joys, Llanarmon!
And older than the Druid oak
His line, the leader of thy folk,
Llewellyn of Llanarmon!

Valiant and divinely proud,
He: till death against him vowed Malevolence, Llanarmon!
Death, angered at a man so great,
Sent travelling from the Ghostly Gate
The lone deathcry, Llanarmon!

From the Ghostly Gate it came,
Keen as wind, and swift as flame:
Thou knowest it, Llanarmon!
But wildest flame, and fiercest wind,
Less fearful are to strong mankind,
Than that strange fear, Llanarmon!

High in heaven had there been
Horrors heard, and visions seen,
By whispering Llanarmon:
Armed hosts, at onset long and loud
Clashing within the sullen cloud,
Clanged over pale Llanarmon.

On the winds' waste passages,
Dim death's presage angel is
To eyes of man, Llanarmon!
But when, since solemn earth began,
Pierced agony to ears of man,
Clearer than this, Llanarmon?

Not a spirit, that, of air,
Earth, or water: past compare,
To agonized Llanarmon

Comes that immitigable cry;
The music sent, before they die,
The princes of Llanarmon!

Through the vasty Druid trees
Murmuring to the mountain breeze
Bravely, above Llanarmon,
Even as it were the sea in surge,
Down swept the dolour and the dirge
At midnight on Llanarmon.

Ah, the waft of plangent breath,
Harbinger of ready death
To shuddering Llanarmon!
A tide of sorrow strongly set
From the gray region of regret
Toward thee, forlorn Llanarmon!

Strong men blanched to hear that tone,
Lovers closelier clasped their own,
In tremulous Llanarmon:
Until within Llewellyn's halls
Rose, rang, around the trophied walls:
Woe for bereaved Llanarmon!

On the wolfskins he had lain,
Prisoned long in burning pain:
What tears were thine, Llanarmon!
Sorrow! upon the thundering field
Not his, his soul in death to yield,
Fighting for thee, Llanarmon!

Bitterness of wounding fire
To his heart drew surely nigher,
As death drew nigh Llanarmon:
Until, while wailed the herald cry,
Upright he sprang, and stood to die,
So: Lion of Llanarmon!

Lion soul and eagle face
Fought with death, a splendid space:
Oh, proud be thou, Llanarmon!
Not man with man, but man with death
Wrestled: thine hoariest minstrel saith
No greater deed, Llanarmon!

Amid lightning of blue swords
Noblier never died thy lords,
Than died this lord, Llanarmon!
Fell the high face, the great heart broke:
Within the Shadowy Isle he woke,
Thy paladin, Llanarmon!

White and stern Llewellyn slept,
While his praising people kept
Vigil in sad Llanarmon:
The cry, that called this Man of men,
Hushed, leaving them but silence then,
Dark silence, in Llanarmon.

LAMB.

To Alfred Pollard.

SAINT CHARLES! for Thackeray called thee so:
Saint, at whose name our fond hearts glow:
See now, this age of tedious woe,
That snaps and snarls!
Thine was a life of tragic shade;
A life, of care and sorrow made:
But nought could make thine heart afraid,
Gentle Saint Charles!

Encumbered dearly with old books,
Thou, by the pleasant chimney nooks,

Didst laugh, with merry-meaning looks,
Thy griefs away:
We, bred on modern magazines,
Point out, how much our sadness means;
And some new woe our wisdom gleans,
Day by dull day.

Lover of London! whilst thy feet
Haunted each old familiar street,
Thy brave heart found life's turmoil sweet,
Despite life's pain.
We fume and fret and, when we can,
Cry up some new and noisy plan,
Big with the Rights and Wrongs of Man:
And where's the gain?

Gentle Saint Charles! I turn to thee,
Tender and true: thou teachest me
To take with joy, what joys there be,
And bear the rest.
Walking thy London day by day,
The thought of thee makes bright my way,
And in thy faith I fain would stay,
Doing my best.

Along the Mall, along the Strand,
Each turn I take, still thou dost stand,
A patron spirit, at mine hand:
So, should my choice,
Beside the dear book-laden stall,
On books not books perversely fall:
Nay! take the play, the pastoral!
Pleads thy wise voice.

So, though the world be full of noise;
And most new books, but foolish toys;
I share with thee thine ancient joys,
Marvell or Quarles:

So, tired with rambling through the Town,
I taste the rich delights of Browne;
With Elia for the evening's crown,
Gentle Saint Charles!

SATANAS.

To Forge Santayana.

ECCE ! Princeps infernorum,
Rex veneficus amorum
Vilium et mortiferorum,
Ecce ! regnat Lucifer :
Animis qui dominatur,
Quibus coelum spoliatur ;
Qui malignus bona fatur,
Cor corrumpens suaviter.

Fructus profert ; inest cinis :
Profert flores plenos spinis :
Vitae eius mors est finis :
Crux est eius requies.
Qualis illic apparebit
Cruciatu, et manebit !
Quantas ista quot habebit
Mors amaritudines !

Iuventutis quam formosa
Floret inter rosas rosa !
Venit autem vitiosa
Species infamiae :
Veniunt crudeles visus,
Voces simulati risus ;
Et inutilis fit nixus
Flebilis laetitiae.

Quanto vitium splendescit,
Tanto anima nigrescit ;

Tanto tandem cor marcescit,
Per peccata dulcia.
Gaudens mundi Princeps mali
Utitur veneno tali,
Voluptate Avernali ;
O mellita vitia !

Gaudet Princeps huius mundi
Videns animam confundi;
Cordis amat moribundi
Aspectare proelium.
Vana tentat, vana quaerens,
Cor anhelum, frustra moerens;
Angit animae inhaerens
Flamma cor miserrimum.

Gaudet Rector tenebrarum
Immolare cor amarum;
Satiare furiarum
Rex sorores avidas.
Vae! non stabit in aeternum
Regnum, ait Rex, infernum :
Sed, dum veniat Supernum,
Dabo vobis victimas.

TO MORFYDD DEAD.

I.

WOULD, to the glory of thine eyes might change,
In passionate strange surprise,
Lightning, that in darkness flies !

Oh, fairer yet ! would, an unbending sheaf
Of steel my grief might end,
And to thine my freed soul send !

Would, I might meet swift death from flight of spears!
I waste in tears the night,
Morfydd, O my lost delight!

I would, that on the fiercest field of blood,
Morfydd! I stood, no shield
Sheltering my breast unsteed!

I would, that swords of death rang round my way,
This weary day, and found
Home within the heart, thine crowned!

I would, that my freed soul within the wind
Might fly, and find, and win
Thine, and joy of death begin!

I would, that with eternal wings we went,
All sorrow spent, all things
Ended, save the song love sings!

Sweet spears and swords, who send his due to death!
My sad heart saith not you
Nay: ah, swift then, pierce it through!
1895.

II.

MORFYDD at midnight
Met the Nameless Ones:
Now she wanders on the winds,
White and lone.
I would give the light
Of eternal suns,
To be with her on the winds,
No more lone!

Oh, wild sea of air!
Oh, night's vast sweet noon!
We would wander through the night,

Star and star.
Nay! but she, most fair!
Sun to me and moon :
I the vassal of her flight,
Far and far.

Morfydd at midnight
Met the Nameless Ones:
Now she wanders on the winds,
White and lone.
Take from me the light,
God! of all Thy suns:
Give me her, who on the winds
Wanders lone!

THE DARKNESS.

To the Rev. Fr. Dover, S. J.

MASTER of spirits ! hear me : King of souls !
I kneel before Thine altar, the long night,
Besieging Thee with penetrable prayers ;
And all I ask, light from the Face of God.
Thy darkness Thou hast given me enough,
The dark clouds of Thine angry majesty :
Now give me light ! I cannot always walk
Surely beneath the full and starless night.
Lighten me, fallen down, I know not where,
Save, to the shadows and the fear of death.
Thy Saints in light see light, and sing for joy :
Safe from the dark, safe from the dark and cold.
But from my dark comes only doubt of light :
Disloyalty, that trembles to despair.
Now bring me out of night, and with the sun
Clothe me, and crown me with Thy seven stars,
Thy spirits in the hollow of Thine hand.
Thou from the still throne of Thy tabernacle
Wilt come to me in glory, O Lord God !

Thou wilt, I doubt Thee not : I worship Thee
 Before Thine holy altar, the long night.
 Else have I nothing in the world, but death :
 Thine hounding winds rush by me day and night,
 Thy seas roar in mine ears : I have no rest,
 No peace, but am afflicted constantly,
 Driven from wilderness to wilderness.
 And yet Thou hast a perfect house of light,
 Above the four great winds, an house of peace :
 Its beauty of the crystal and the dew,
 Guard Angels and Archangels, in their hands
 The blade of a sword shaken. Thither bring
 Thy servant : when the black night falls on me,
 With bitter voices tempting in the gloom,
 Send out Thine armies, flaming ministers,
 And shine upon the night : for what I would,
 I cannot, save these help me. O Lord God !
 Now, when my prayers upon Thine altar lie,
 When Thy dark anger is too hard for me :
 Though vision of Thyself, through flying fire,
 Have mercy, and give light, and stablish me !

1889.

CHRISTMAS.

To the Rev. William Busby.

I.

SING Bethlehem ! Sing Bethlehem !
 You daughters of Jerusalem !
 Keep sorrow for Gethsemani,
 And mourning for Mount Calvary !

Why are your lids and lashes wet ?
 Here is no darkling Olivet.
 Sing Bethlehem ! Sing Bethlehem !
 You daughters of Jerusalem !

*How should we sing of Bethlehem,
We, daughters of Jerusalem?
We are the people of the Jews :
Our balms would soothe Him not, but bruise.*

*Ah, Calvary ! ah, Calvary !
We wretched women cry to thee :
We, daughters of Jerusalem ;
And enemies of Bethlehem.*

*With faces cast upon the dust,
We weep those things, which do we must :
Our tears embitter Calvary,
And water thee, Gethsemani !*

*Nay, Bethlehem ! Sing Bethlehem !
Poor daughters of Jerusalem !
You know not, what you do : but He
Will pardon you on Calvary.*

1888.

II.

THE last week before Christmas,
Hoar lies the orchard grass
From pear tree unto apple tree,
Where feet well shod must pass :
By dripping trees a woodman's fire
Burns the last leaves, alas !
And the blue smoke drifts through the air,
Above the branches bare.

The last week before Christmas,
The last before the snow :
Stand steaming cattle by the hedge,
With meek heads bending low :
The chattering rivulet flows fast,
While there is time to flow :

And the blue smoke drifts through the air,
Above the branches bare.

The last week before Christmas,
Red berries few to find :
The brown fir cones upon the bough
Move to a gentle wind :
Down the gray sky go chilly gleams,
Bringing the sun to mind :
And the blue smoke drifts through the air,

Oh ! last week before Christmas,
Second before New Year :
Heap heart of oak upon the hearth,
And keep you now good cheer :
With Christus natus for an health,
And Christi Mater dear :
Then blue's the sky, and bright's the air,

III.

Tres. HAIL to our brother Gabriel !
Now we, thy brothers, Michael,
And Raphael,
And Uriel,
Hail thee, come home from Israel !

Gabriel. I saw among the lilies dwell
Mary our Queen, who pleaseth well
The Spirit of our God. All hail,
Mary our Queen ! Sing, thou in mail,
Lord Michael ! Sing, Uriel ; thou,
Clothed with the sun upon thy brow !
And sing thou Hail ! whose pilgrims now
Shall climb the steep ways out of Hell,
Joy of poor pilgrims, Raphael !

- Michael.* I, Captain of the Lord God's host,
Give glory to the Holy Ghost,
And give to Mary, loved of Him !
- Uriel.* I, Chief of the white Cherubim,
Give thanks to Mary : and to Him,
That Holy Child, Who shall be born,
King Jesus Christ, on Christmas morn.
- Raphael.* I, Prince of burning Seraphim,
Give praise, give praise, to Mary Queen,
With whom the Grace of God hath been.
- Omnes.* Now play through Heaven the Angel bell :
Make music of the Angelus !
The King is come to Israel :
The Queen of Heaven is found for us.

IV.

CHRIST hath Christ's Mother
Dicamus ! Canamus !
Borne, our dear Brother,
Canamus ! Dicamus !
In the stall of Bethlehem.
Then leave we all Jerusalem,
To kiss the King of Bethlehem :
Cui vocibus gaudentibus
Dicamus ! Canamus !
Gloriam.

Come from the city !
Dicamus ! Canamus !
God hath had pity
Canamus ! Dicamus !
On His people Israel.
And pity will He have as well

On Gentiles beyond Israel :

Nunc vocibus gaudentibus

Dicamus ! Canamus !

Gloriam.

Laud in the highest !

Dicamus ! Canamus !

Now, Death, thou diest :

Canamus ! Dicamus !

Lo ! God goeth to His grave,

Us dead and dying men to save,

And bring the captives from the grave :

Quo vocibus gaudentibus

Dicamus ! Canamus !

Gloriam.

Snows the land cover :

Dicamus ! Canamus !

Lo ! comes our Lover :

Canamus ! Dicamus !

Comes a glory, comes a light :

Gold on snow and in the height :

Glory from the Light of Light !

Quin vocibus gaudentibus

Dicamus ! Canamus !

Gloriam.

Praise to the Father !

Dicamus ! Canamus !

Now will He gather

Canamus ! Dicamus !

Us His helpless little ones

From endless Death's dominions :

Us, God the Father's little ones.

Cui vocibus gaudentibus,

Dicamus ! Canamus !

Gloriam.

Praise to Son Jesus !
    Dicamus ! Canamus !
Him, whose Cross frees us
    Canamus ! Dicamus !
From the cruel hand of sin.
Now first to Him our songs begin,
Since now our hearts have done with sin.
    Sic vocibus gaudentibus
    Dicamus ! Canamus !
    Gloriam.

Praise Mary Mother !
    Dicamus ! Canamus !
Mary, none other,
    Canamus ! Dicamus !
Welcome might the Holy Ghost,
Because her soul was pure the most :
Now praise be to the Holy Ghost !
    Dicamus ! Canamus !
    Gloriam.

Praise, praise, and praises,
    Dicamus ! Canamus !
Earth with Heaven raises
    Canamus ! Dicamus !
To the glorious Trinity !
Sons of new morning, mingle we
With morning stars our melody :
    Et vocibus gaudentibus
    Dicamus ! Canamus !
    Gloriam.

1888.

CAROLS.

To the Rev. Fr. Russell, S. J.

I.

FAIR snow and winter wind,
Be not unkind
To this your King !
Fall soft, and murmur mild,
About the Child :
Lest His first hour be suffering.

See ! with large, gentle eyes,
Close where He lies,
Look ox and ass :
They bow their patient, meek
Heads to the weak
Lamb, Who to sacrifice must pass.

Soon shall come Cross and Crown
In Salem Town :
But now at least,
Rocked upon Mary's breast,
Let Jesu rest :
And all the earth keep Christmas Feast.

With Him your sorrows sleep.
No longer weep,
O pectora mortalia !
Sing you the Angel Song,
Sing loud and long !
Sing : In Excelsis Gloria !

1895.

To the Rev. Fr. Dawson, O.M.I.

II.

SAY, what saw you, Man ?
And say, what heard ?

*I saw, while Angels sang,
Jesus the Word.*

Saw you aught else, Man ?
Aught else heard you ?
*I saw the Son of Man,
And the wind blew.*

Saw you beside, Man ?
Or heard beside ?
*I saw, while murderers mocked,
The Crucified.*

Nay ! what is this, Man ?
And who is He ?
*The Holy Child must die
For you and me.*

Oh ! say, Brother ! Oh ! say, Brother !
What then shall be ?
*Home in His Sacred Heart
For you and me.*

Oh ! what can we give, Brother !
For such a thing ?
*Body and soul, Brother !
To Christ the King.*

1896.

CHRISTMAS AND IRELAND.

To Miss Milligan.

THE golden stars give warmthless fire,
As weary Mary goes through night :
Her feet are torn by stone and briar ;
She hath no rest, no strength, no light :

O Mary, weary in the snow,
Remember Ireland's woe !

O Joseph, sad for Mary's sake !
Look on our earthly Mother too :
Let not the heart of Ireland break
With agony, the ages through :
For Mary's love, love also thou
Ireland, and save her now !

Harsh were the folk, and bitter stern,
At Bethlehem, that night of nights.
For you no cheering hearth shall burn :
We have no room here, you no rights.
O Mary and Joseph ! hath not she,
Ireland, been even as ye ?

The ancient David's royal house
Was thine, Saint Joseph ! wherefore she,
Mary, thine Ever Virgin Spouse,
To thine own city went with thee.
Behold ! thy citizens disown
The heir of David's throne !

Nay, more ! The Very King of kings
Was with you, coming to his own :
They thrust Him forth to lowliest things ;
The poor meek beasts of toil alone
Stood by, when came to piteous birth
The God of all the earth.

And she, our Mother Ireland, knows
Insult, and infamies of wrong :
Her innocent children clad with woes,
Her weakness trampled by the strong :
And still upon her Holy Land
Her pitiless foemen stand.

From Manger unto Cross and Crown
Went Christ : and Mother Mary passed
Through Seven Sorrows, and sat down
Upon the Angel Throne at last.
Thence, Mary ! to thine own Child pray,
For Ireland's hope this day !

She wanders amid winter still,
The dew of tears is on her face :
Her wounded heart takes yet its fill
Of desolation and disgrace.
God still is God ! And through God she Foreknows her joy to be.

The snows shall perish at the spring,
The flowers pour fragrance round her feet :
Ah, Jesus ! Mary ! Joseph ! bring
This mercy from the Mercy Seat !
Send it, sweet King of Glory, born
Humbly on Christmas Morn !

1896.

MAGIC.

To John Myres.

I.

BECAUSE I work not, as logicians work,
Who but to ranked and marshalled reason yield :
But my feet hasten through a faery field,
Thither, where underneath the rainbow lurk
Spirits of youth, and life, and gold, concealed :

Because by leaps I scale the secret sky,
Upon the motion of a cunning star :
Because I hold the winds oracular,
And think on airy warnings, when men die :
Because I tread the ground, where shadows are :

Therefore my name is grown a popular scorn,
And I a children's terror ! Only now,
For I am old ! O Mother Nature ! thou
Leavest me not : wherefore, as night turns morn,
A magian wisdom breaks beneath my brow.

These painful toilers of the bounded way,
Chaired within cloister halls : can they renew
Ashes to flame ? Can they of moonlit dew
Prepare the immortalizing draughts ? Can they Give gold for refuse earth, or bring to view

Earth's deepest doings ? Let them have their school,
Their science, and their safety ! I am he,
Whom Nature fills with her philosophy,
And takes for kinsman. Let me be their fool,
And wise man in the winds' society.

1887.

II.

THEY wrong with ignorance a royal choice,
Who cavil at my loneliness and labour :
For them, the luring wonder of a voice,
The viol's cry for them, the harp and tabour :
    For me divine austerity,
    And voices of philosophy.

Ah ! light imaginations, that discern
No passion in the citadel of passion :
Their fancies lie on flowers ; but my thoughts turn
To thoughts and things of an eternal fashion :
    The majesty and dignity
    Of everlasting verity.

Mine is the sultry sunset, when the skies
Tremble with strange, intolerable thunder :
And at the dead of an hushed night, these eyes
Draw down the soaring oracles winged with wonder :

From the four winds they come to me,
The Angels of Eternity.

Men pity me ; poor men, who pity me !
Poor, charitable, scornful souls of pity !
I choose laborious loneliness : and ye
Lead Love in triumph through the dancing city :
While death and darkness girdle me,
I grope for immortality.

1887.

III.

Pour slowly out your holy balm of oil,
Within the grassy circle : let none spoil
Our favourable silence. Only I,
Winding wet vervain round mine eyes, will cry
Upon the powerful Lord of this our toil ;
Until the first lark sing, the last star die.

Proud Lord of twilight, Lord of midnight, hear !
Thou hast forgone us ; and hast drowsed thine ear,
When haggard voices hail thee : thou hast turned
Blind eyes, dull nostrils, when our vows have burned
Herbs on the moonlit flame, in reverent fear :
Silence is all, our love of thee hath earned.

Master ! we call thee, calling on thy name !
Thy savoury laurel crackles : the blue flame
Gleams, leaps, devours apace the dewy leaves.
Vain ! for nor breast of labouring midnight heaves,
Nor chilled stars fall : all things remain the same,
Save this new pang, that stings, and burns, and cleaves.

Despising us, thou knowest not ! We stand,
Bared for thine adoration, hand in hand :
Steely our eyes, our hearts to all but thee
Iron : as waves of the unresting sea,

The wind of thy least Word is our command :
And our ambition hails thy sovereignty.

Come, Sisters ! for the King of night is dead :
Come ! for the frailest star of stars hath sped :
And though we waited for the waking sun,
Our King would wake not. Come ! our world is done :
For all the witchery of the world is fled,
And lost all wanton wisdom long since won.

FRIENDS.

I.

O GUARDIAN Angel ! Patron Saints !
You, who have cared for me :
You, who have borne with all my plaints
So patiently !

I ask but one thing now : I pray,
God grant through you, each friend
Be mine within Eternal Day,
World without end.

1894.

II.

POOR powerless Sorrow ! Helpless Death !
Think they to worst me in the end ?
Come when they will, my Faith still saith :
I face them with a single friend.

Were I alone, I could not fight
The imperious Powers : I should but fear,
And tremble in the lonely night,
With never a friend of all friends near.

But in the eyes of every friend,
Voice, or the holding of his hand,
I learn, how love can never end :
Oh, Heart of God ! I understand.

1894.

III.

THE haunting hopes, the perfect dreams,
The visionary joys, that fill
Mine heart with sudden gracious gleams :
Through friendship they grow clearer still.

Each friend possesses, each betrays,
Some secret of the eternal things :
Each one has walked celestial ways,
And held celestial communings.

The smiles upon their lips are bright
With beauty from the Face of God :
Their eyes keep something of that Light,
Which knows nor pause, nor period.

1894.

IV.

O PATRON Saints of all my friends !
O Guardian Angels of them all !
With them begins, with them still ends,
My prayer's most passionate call.

You know my voice : you know their names,
That wing so its least selfish tone
Across your white celestial flames,
And up to the White Throne.

Heaven were not Heaven, and they not there ;
Heaven were no Heaven, my friends away :
O Saints and Angels ! hear the prayer,
I pray you every day.

INCENSE.

To Miss Alice Brown.

ALL the annulling clouds, that lie
Far in wait for years to come,
Shall not force me to forget
All the witcheries of home,
While in the world there linger yet
Heliotrope and mignonette :
In their scent home cannot die.

When the delicate dewdrops gleamed
Tremulous on the early blooms ;
The full sweetness of the dawn,
Gathered during twilight glooms,
Rose above the fields and lawn,
Ravishing me with fragrance, drawn
From each flower, that there had dreamed.

Then was innocent glory shed
All about the garden ground :
Gods of Helicon well had paced
By the laurels, and around
The bright lawn ; nor deemed disgraced
Their high Godhead, nor misplaced
Their descent, since thither led.

By a maze of gossamer dew
Measured, lay the pasture leas :
Ruddy gray the sunlight glanced
Through the rippling poplar trees,
On the airy webs, where chanced
Dainty faery feet had danced
Without noise, the soft night through.

That was morn indeed ! And yet,
Gone the wondrous witchery ;
Gone the charm, the enchantment gone ;
Still to aging memory

Come the scents, the lights, that shone,
That were sweet : dreams lie upon
Heliotrope and mignonette.

Stronger than remembered looks,
Nearer than old written words,
Cling the loved old fragrances ;
At the matin time of birds,
Giving birth to memories :
Not one fancy perishes,
Born before we woke to books.

All will come again : once more
We shall fling our arms upon
Morning's wind, and ravish yet
All its load of incense, won
From rich wilding mignonette,
Clustered heliotrope, and wet
Meadows, O fair years of yore !

1887.

II.

THEY do the will of beauty and regret,
Odours and travelling faery fragrances :
The breath of things, I never can forget,
The haunting spirit of old memories.
Gray grows the visible world ; fair cadences
Break into death : sweet are the field flowers yet.

Softly at evening, hard upon twilight,
Old earth breathes balmy air on hushing winds,
And takes with ravishment the face of night.
Pensive and solitary old age finds
Calm in the vespereal, mild air, that minds
His dwindling hour, of childhood's far delight.

A breath, a thought, a dream ! Ah, what a choir
Of long stilled voices : and of long closed eyes,

What a light ! So came, so mine heart's desire
Came through the pinewood, where the sunlight dies
To-night. Since now these fragrant memories
Live, lives not also she, their soul of fire ?

1887.

TO PASSIONS.

To Henry Davray.

I.

THAT hate, and that, and that again,
Easy and simple are to bear :
My hatred of myself is pain
Beyond my tolerable share.

Comfort and joy, I have not claimed :
I ask no vast felicity.
But of myself to live ashamed
Is ever present agony.

O haunting thoughts, awhile away !
O brooding memories, go sleep !
Give me one hour of every day :
Yours be the rest to vex and keep.

1894.

II.

DARKER than death, fiercer than fire,
Hatefuller than the heart of Hell :
I know thee, O mine own desire !
I know not mine own self so well.

Passion, imperious, insolent,
Thou that destroyest me ! oh, slay
Me now, or leave me to repent :
I weary of thy lingering way.

1894.

III.

THOU fool ! For if thou have thy way with me,
 Thou wilt be still the same : but victor, I
 Should make some fair perfection out of thee,
 And reach the starry Heaven of Heavens thereby.

But thou preferrest the dark joy of Hell,
 Triumphant over me drawn down to it ?
 Thou fool ! My lost soul ever more would tell
 Thy folly, and the anguish of the Pit.

1893.

HUGO.

To Fernand Ortman.

I.

SILENT, who wast so long a voice of fire divine :
 Down the world's mighty winds, a chaunt oracular !
 Vanished, who wast a light and splendour crystalline :
 Highest in Heaven, a star beside the Morning Star !
 We, glad in grief, salute that glory, which is thine
 Among the Thrones of Death, where Death's Undying

May 22.

II.

CROWNED for thy Throne of Death, this thy last lower
                   night,
 Master ! thou sleepest well : and we, who love thee,
                   yearn
 Beyond the walls of flame, that circle all our days,
 On wings of music charioted, and song's delight,
 To where the Seven Lamps with endless ardour burn
 Before the Sapphire Throne, Spirits of perfect praise.

Victor and loving Lord, who, seeing this poor world
 Wasted and worn with wrongs, wouldest not war, but peace,

And little children's laughter, and the law of love !
Now thou art winds, and waves, and terrible thunders hurled
From out night's battling clouds : and when storm voices cease,
Thou art the calm, whereunder gentler waters move.

Ah, music from thy lips, light from thy lightning eyes,
Death from thine holy scorn : for these thy gifts of gold,
What thanks, what lauds, what faith, what hearts made
whole through fire ?
Our silence and our tears thou takest : vainly tries
The passion of our pain by song to pierce the cold
Gulphs of the Shadow of Death, winged by our love's desire.

May 31.

III.

SWEPT through night, ah Master ! alone and royal ;
Soared past deeps of night to the heights of morning :
What high rapture rang from thy lips, anointed
Son of the sunrise ?

What divinest passion of morning music
Rises round those Fields, where the feet of singers
Go through golden flowers of eternal springtide,
Master ! to meet thee ?

Here love's multitudinous praise of weeping
Hails thee passing home to the heart of earth : nay !
Not in earth, but thou at the heart of Heaven,
Victor ! abidest.

There the eyes of Æschylus glow thee welcome :
Virgil hails thee : ah, for thy consecration,
Shakespeare bids thee sit by his side : and Dante,
Dante salutes thee !

June 2 : 1885.

CROMWELL.

To E. K. Chambers.

Now, on his last of ways,
The great September star,
That crowned him on the days
Of Worcester and Dunbar,
Shines through the menacing night afar.

This day, his England knows
Freedom and fear in one ;
She holds her breath, while goes
Her mighty mastering son :
His sceptre-sword its work hath done.

O crowning mercy, Death !
Peace to the stormy heart,
Peace to the passionate breath,
And awful eyes : their part
Is done, for thou their victor art !

Yet, is it peace with him ?
Answer, O Drogheda's dead !
O ghosts, beside the dim
Waters and shadows dread !
What of his coming shall be said ?

Answer, O fatal King !
Whose sad, prophetic eyes
Foresaw his glory bring
Thy death ! He also lies
Dead : hath he peace, O King of sighs ?

His soul's most secret thought,
Eternal Light declares :
He, who in darkness wrought,
To very Truth now bares
All hidden hopes, all deep despairs.

Maintains he in Death's land
The quarrel of the Lord,
As when from his live hand
Leaped lightnings of the sword?
Is Come, good servant! his reward?

Hath the word come, Well done!
Or the pure word of doom,
Sending him from the sun
To walk in bitter gloom,
With the lost angels of the tomb?

Prince of the iron rod
And war's imperious mail,
Did he indeed for God
Fight ever, and prevail,
Bidding the Lord of hosts All Hail?

Or was it ardent lust
Of majesty and might,
That stung and fired and thrust
His soul into the fight:
Mystic desire and fierce delight?

Nay, peace for ever more!
O martyred souls! He comes,
Your conquered conqueror:
No tramlings now, nor drums,
Are his, who wrought your martyrdoms.

Tragic, triumphant form,
He comes to your dim ways,
Comes upon wings of storm:
Greet him, with pardoning praise,
With marvelling awe, with equal gaze!

1895.

KINGS OF MEN.

I.

RENAN AND TENNYSON.

FROM out two golden mouths, the marvellous breath,
France! may not charm thee more; nor, England!
thee:

Only between two silences of death
Sounds the vast voice of the unquiet sea:
While moving on the waters God is heard,
Eternal Spirit with Eternal Word.

September: 1892.

II.

RENAN AND NEWMAN.

IN wild October, fifty years ago,
Renan left Saint-Sulpice, a Catholic
No more, no more the child of Holy Rome:
Upon the third day after that day, lo!
Knelt Newman before Father Dominic,
And entered in unto the Holy Home.
O mystery of calling! Who shall say?
Did after joy, with Angel Hosts, outweigh
Woe for the darkness of the earlier day?

October: 1895.

SONGS.

I.

Now in golden glory goes
Autumn toward the time of snows:
Ere white winter come indeed,
Speed the hours, with music speed.

Heed not winter's mournful breath,
Sighing at the thought of death:
Make but music, dearly sad;
Make but music, gravely glad.

Music is a king of kings,
Mightiest of immortal things :
Music is a lord of lords,
Ruling all with royal chords.

Though the woodland ways be chill,
Though the woodland choirs be still :
Music moves the starry choir,
Music sets the soul on fire.

II.

COUNTRY singers, leave not mute
Music of the voice and lute :
Country singers, come and sing ;
Voice with viol rivalling.

Chaunt to Pales, chaunt to Pan,
Gods of country maid and man :
They have blessed the shepherd's fold,
Filled the fields with waves of gold.

On the lawns, fair lovers all !
Dance, till Hesper homeward call ;
Lapped in dreamland, you will keep
Safely your delightful sleep.

But the red sun lingers yet :
While you sing, he will not set.
He is lord of light and song :
Hail him, and both joys prolong.

1893.

NINETY-EIGHT.

To R. Barry O'Brien.

Who fears to speak of Ninety-Eight ?
He, who despairs of Ireland still :
Whose paltry soul finds nothing great
In honest failure : he, whose will,

Feeble and faint in days of gloom,
Takes old defeat for final doom.

Who fears to speak of Ninety-Eight?
The man, who fears to speak of death :
Who clings and clasps the knees of fate,
And whimpers with his latest breath :
Who hugs his comfort to his heart,
And dares not play a Christian part.

Who fears to speak of Ninety-Eight?
The renegade, who sells his trust :
Whose love has rottened into hate,
Whose hopes have withered into dust :
He, who denies, and deems it mad,
The faith, his nobler boyhood had.

Who fears to speak of Ninety-Eight?
The enemy of Ireland fears !
For Ireland undegenerate
Keeps yet the spirit of old years :
He sees, in visions of the night,
A nation arming for the right.

Who fears to speak of Ninety-Eight?
Not he, who hates a poisonous peace :
For, while the days of triumph wait,
And till the days of sorrow cease,
He, with the Lord of Hosts his friend,
Will fight for Ireland to the end.

Let sword cross sword, or thought meet thought :
One fire of battle thrills them both.
Deliverance only can be wrought
By warfare without stay or sloth :
And by your prayers at Heaven's high gate,
True hearts, that beat in Ninety-Eight !

COMRADES.

To Marmaduke Langdale.

At least, it was a life of swords,
Our life ! nor lived in vain :
We fought the fight with mighty lords,
Nor dastards have we slain.

We stirred at morn, and through bright air
Swept to the trysting place :
Winds of the mountains in our hair,
And sunrise on each face.

No need to spur ! our horses knew
The joy, to which we went :
Over the brightening lands they flew
Forward, and were content.

On each man's lips, an happy smile ;
In each man's eyes, delight :
So, fired with foretaste, mile on mile,
We thundered to the fight.

Let death come now, and from the sun
Hide me away : what then ?
My days have seen more prowess done,
Than years of other men.

Oh, warriors of the rugged heights,
We, where the eagles nest :
They, courtly soldiers, gentle knights,
By kings and dames caressed.

Not theirs, the passion of the sword,
The fire of living blades !
Like men, they fought : and found reward
In dance and feast, like maids.

We, on the mountain lawns encamped,
Close under the great stars,
'Turned, when the horses hard by stamped,
And dreamed again, of wars :

Or, if one woke, he saw the gleam
Of moonlight, on each face,
Touch its tumultuary dream
With moments of mild grace.

We hated no man ; but we fought
With all men : the fierce wind
Lashes the wide earth without thought ;
Our tempest scourged mankind.

'They cursed us, living without laws !
'They, in their pride of peace :
Who bared no blade, but in just cause ;
Nor grieved, that war should cease.

O spirit of the wild hill-side !
O spirit of the steel !
We answered nothing, when they cried,
But challenged with a peal.

And, when the battle blood had poured
'To slake our souls' desire :
Oh, brave to hear, how torrents roared
Beside the pinewood fire !

My brothers, whom in warrior wise
The death of deaths hath stilled !
Ah, you would understand these eyes,
Although with strange tears filled !

1889.

THE FAITH.

To Miss Blanche Fagan.

MOURNFUL Inisfail !
Wind and sea
Sigh and wail,
Sigh and wail, for thee !

By the willows we,
Inisfail !
Weep for thee,
Mother of the Gael !

Lonely Inisfail !
Ah, to see
Worn and pale,
Faint and wounded, thee !

How can our hearts be
Strong and hale ?
Thine in thee
Cries, O Inisfail !

Cries, in bitter bale,
Venge Thou me !
Inisfail !
God is hearkening thee.

When the storm-winds flee,
Gone the gale :
Peace shall thee
Heal, O Inisfail !

Then by hill and vale,
Lough and sea,
Inisfail !
Joy shall sing of thee

Glory, and what glee,
Then shall hail
Thee, ah ! thee,
Mournful Inisfail !

1894.

SURSUM CORDA.

To Francis Thompson.

Lift up your hearts ! We lift
Them up
To God, and to God's gift,
The Passion Cup.

Lift up your hearts ! Ah, so
We will :
Through storm of fire or snow,
We lift them still.

Lift up your hearts ! your hearts !
Ah, yes !
For then a glory parts
Our cloudiness.

Lift up your hearts ! Good sooth,
We must :
Shall they, the arks of truth,
Lie filled with dust ?

Lift up your hearts ! O Christ,
Thine Heart !
Broken, sweet Sacrificed !
By us Thou art.

Lift up your hearts ! oh, high !
We make
Wide Wounds to enter by
In His, we brake.

Lift up your hearts ! Nay, see !
They are Lifted to His, where He Is Sun and Star.

Lift up your hearts ! But He Bows His.
Depths of our infamy :
There that Heart is !

1896.

A MEMORY.

To Ernest Radford.

FIVE miles and more of common land,
Where yellowing elm trees, either hand,
Rise among cottages of thatched
Thick roofs, with massy stonecrop patched ;
Old-fashioned blossoms droop before
The lattice windows and low door :
Whilst all around there will not cease
Quaint clamour of the flapping geese ;
Gray wings, white breasts, a storm of feathers,
Delighting in the worst of weathers.
The plashy roadway winds along ;
And the wind wails in gusty song
Down from the heather hills' far blue
Mists and white clouds, and wanders through
All the sad common : yellowing elms
Moan, as the quick gust overwhelms
Their wintry fellowship of boughs.
One yellow, curved, vast waggon ploughs
Homeward through ancient ruts, with creak
And groan of the great wheels, that speak
Their slow and cumbrous travelling.
And winds, and elms, and wheels, all sing
The burden of the wintering ;

Of dead leaves rotting, field mists rising ;
Melancholy signs of snow surprising
Earth with dreary wonder ; rivers,
Where the steely water shivers ;
Hedges bare of berries red ;
A dead world ! all nature dead.
A few drops wake the dull road-pools ;
A drizzling rain, that chills, not cools,
The tired and smoking team ; while gray
Dolorous clouds make faster way
Over pale skies, with ragged rims.
Their heavy trailing clogs and dims,
What waterish ray of light yet swims
Out from the lamentable sky.
Earth decays, Heavens are weeping : I
Tramp the long common, glad to be Still summer-hearted, sorrow-free.

1887.

IN A WORKHOUSE.

To Hartley Withers.

OLD hopes I saw there : and perchance I saw
Other old passions in their trembling age,
Withered, and desolate, but not yet dead :
And I had rather seen an house of death,
Than those live men, unmanned, wasted, forlorn,
Looking toward death out of their empty lives.
They could not with the sad comfort of thought
Fill up the miserable day ; nor muse
Upon the shadowy nature of the world,
And on that meditation stay themselves.
Nor wisdom of bright dreaming came there back
To these dulled minds, that never had the time,
The hard day's labour done, to do with dreams.
Nought theirs, but sullen waiting for no end :
Nought, but surrender to necessity.

No solemn faith, nor no impassioned trust,
 Mastered their wills : here were no pagan souls,
 Grandly enduring dooms, mighty to bear
 Stern visitation of majestic fates,
 Proudly alone and strong : these had no wills,
 These were none else, than worn and haggard things,
 Nor men, nor brutes, nor shades : and yet alive.
 Bruised victims of the trampling years, hurt souls,
 They fell before the march of their own kind :
 Now, scarred memorials of laborious war,
 Tragic and monumental live these men.

PAX CHRISTI.

To the memory of the Very Rev. Father Lockhart, O.C.

NIGHT has her Stars, and Day his Sun : they pass,
 Stars of the Night ! it fades, Sun of the Day !
 Soft rose leaves lie upon the beaten grass,
 Till the wind whirl them, with itself, away.

Eyes have their fill of light : in every voice
 Lives its own music : but the dear light pales,
 The golden music perishes. What choice,
 What choice is ours, but tears ? For the world fails.

O Sun and Stars ! O glory of the rose !
 O eyes of light, voices of music ! I
 Have mourned, because all beauty fails, and goes
 Quickly away : and the whole world must die.

Yet, Sun and Stars ! Yet, glory of the rose !
 Yet, eyes of light, voices of music ! I
 Know, that from mortal to immortal goes
 Beauty : in triumph can the whole world die.
S. Alban's Day : 1891.

WINCHESTER CLOSE.

To the Rev. H. C. Dickens.

HOLY have been the wanderings here : and here
The beauty hath been shown, of holiness.
Nine hundred years ago, Frithstan the Saint
Put off his mitre, in a rough cowl hiding
The snows of age and care, to go at eve
Among the quiet graves with orison.
The sun fell, and the gentle winds made stir.
By graves, ah ! by how many graves, he went,
Old in war's day : then said he : Requiem
Æternam dona eis, Domine !
Eternal rest, eternal rest, O Lord !
Give Thou these dead. The heart of earth, the hearts
Of poor dead, lapped in earth, heard : slowly grew
A murmur, and a gathering thunder ; slowly
Beneath his feet grew voices of the dead.
And faint, each voice : but sounding as one sea,
Together cried the ghostly multitude,
Cried hungrily to that great prayer : Amen !
Immeasurably surged the Amen : till sank
Softly away the voices of the dead,
Softly : they slept in the cold earth once more
The stilly sleep, glad to have cried that cry.
Frithstan's white face thrilled upward to his God.

1890.

A STRANGER.

To Will Rothenstein.

HER face was like sad things : was like the lights
Of a great city, seen from far off fields,
Or seen from sea : sad things, as are the fires
Lit in a land of furnaces by night :
Sad things, as are the reaches of a stream
Flowing beneath a golden moon alone.

And her clear voice, full of remembrances,
Came like faint music down the distant air.
As though she had a spirit of dead joy
About her, looked the sorrow of her ways :
If light there be, the dark hills are to climb
First : and if calm, far over the long sea.
Fallen from all the world apart she seemed,
Into a silence and a memory.
What had the thin hands done, that now they strained
Together in such passion ? And those eyes,
What saw they long ago, that now they dreamed
Along the busy streets, blind but to dreams ?
Her white lips mocked the world, and all therein :
She had known more than this ; she wanted not
This, who had known the past so great a thing.
Moving about our ways, herself she moved
In things done, years remembered, places gone.
Lonely, amid the living crowds, as dead,
She walked with wonderful and sad regard :
With us, her passing image : but herself
Far over the dark hills and the long sea.

1889.

DE PROFUNDIS.

To Miss Louise Imogen Guiney.

WOULD, that with you I were imparadised,
White Angels around Christ !
That, by the borders of the eternal sea
Singing, I too might be :
Where dewy green the palm trees on the strand,
Your gentle shelter, stand :
Where reigns the Victor Victim, and His Eyes
Control eternities !
Immortally your music flows in sweet
Stream round the Wounded Feet ;

And rises to the Wounded Hands ; and then
     Springs to the Home of Men,
 The Wounded Heart : and there in flooding praise
     Circles, and sings, and stays.
 My broken music wanders in the night,
     Faints, and finds no delight :
 White Angels ! take of it one piteous tone,
     And mix it with your own !
 Then, as He feels your chaunting flow less clear,
     He will but say : I hear
The sorrow of My child on earth ! and send
     Some fair, celestial friend,
 One of yourselves, to help me : and you will,
     Choirs of the Holy Hill,
 Help me, who walk in darkness, far away
     From your enduring day :
 Who have the wilderness for home, till morn
     Break, and my day be born ;
 And on the Mount of Myrrh burn golden white
     Light from the Light of Light.

1897.

BEFORE THE CLOISTER.

To the Hon. Mrs. Henniker.

SORROW, O sister Sorrow, O mine own !
     Whither away hast flown ?
 Without thee, fiery is the flowery earth,
     A flaming dance of mirth,
 A marvel of wild music : I grow frail
     Amid the perfumed gale,
 The rushing of desires to meet delights.
     Sweet Queen of holy nights,
 Lady of gray, wise hours ! come back to me :
     Voice of the sighing sea,
 Voice of the ancient wind, infinite voice !
     Thine austere chaunts rejoice

Mine heart, thine anthems cool me : I grow strong,
Drinking thy bitter song,
Rich with true tears and medicinal dew,
O thou Uranian Muse !
Come, vestal Lady ! in my vain heart light
Thy flame, divinely white !
Come, Lady of the Lilies ! blanch to snow
My soul through sacred woe !
Come thou, through whom I hold in memory
Moonlit Gethsemani :
Come, make a vesper silence round my ways,
And mortify my days :
O Sorrow ! come, through whom alone I keep
Safe from the fatal sleep :
Through whom I count the world a barren loss,
And beautiful the Cross :
Come, Sorrow ! lest in surging joy I drown,
To lose both Cross and Crown.

1896.

TO THE DEAD OF '98.

To the Rev. Father Headley, O.P.

I.

GOD rest you, rest you, rest you, Ireland's dead !
Peace be upon you shed,
Peace from the Mercy of the Crucified,
You, who for Ireland died !
Soft fall on you the dew and gentle airs
Of interceding prayers,
From lowly cabins of our ancient land,
Yours yet, O Sacred Band !
God rest you, rest you : for the fight you fought
Was His ; the end you sought,
His ; from His altar fires you took your flame,
Hailing His Holy Name.

Triumphantly you gave yourselves to death :
And your last breath
Was one last sigh for Ireland, sigh to Him,
As the loved land grew dim.

II.

And still, blessed and martyr souls ! you pray
In the same faith this day :
From forth your dwelling beyond sun and star,
Where only spirits are,
Your prayers in a perpetual flight arise,
To fold before God's Eyes
Their tireless wings, and wait the Holy Word
That one day shall be heard.
*Not unto us, they plead, Thy goodness gave
Our mother to unsleave ;
To us Thou gavest death for love of her :
Ah, what death lovelier ?
But to our children's children give to see
The perfect victory !
Thy dead beseech Thee : to Thy living give
In liberty to live !*

1897.

VINUM DAEMONUM.

To Stephen Phillips.

THE crystal flame, the ruby flame,
Alluring, dancing, revelling !
See them : and ask me not, whence came
This cup I bring.

But only watch the wild wine glow,
But only taste its fragrance : then,
Drink the wild drink I bring, and so
Reign among men.

Only one sting, and then but joy :
One pang of fire, and thou art free.
Then, what thou wilt, thou canst destroy :
Save only me !

Triumph in tumult of thy lust :
Wanton in passion of thy will :
Cry Peace ! to conscience, and it must
At last be still.

I am the Prince of this World : I
Command the flames, command the fires.
Mine are the draughts, that satisfy
This World's desires.

Thy longing leans across the brink :
Ah, the brave thirst within thine eyes !
For there is that within this drink,
Which never dies.

1893.

AN IDEAL.

To Standish O'Grady.

WHITE clouds embrace the dewy field,
Storm's lingering mist and breath :
And hottest Heavens to hot earth yield
Drops from the fire of death.

*Come ! sigh the shrouding airs of earth :
Be with the burning night :
Learn, what her heart of flame is worth,
And eyes of glowing light.*

I come not. Off, odorous airs !
Rose-scented winds, away !

Let passion garnish her wild lairs,
Hold her fierce holiday :

I will not feel her dreamy toils
Glide over heart and eyes :
My thoughts shall never be her spoils,
Nor grow sad memories.

Mine be all proud and lonely scorn,
Keeping the crystal law
And pure air of the eternal morn :
And passion, but of awe.

HEDDON'S MOUTH.

To the Viscount Doneraile.

HAPPY all, who timely know
The bright gorge, that lies below
Trentishoe and Martinhoe.
Down the vale swift Parracombe
Brawls beneath soft alder gloom,
Toward a sea of sunlit sails,
Flashing far away to Wales :
Wales, a faery land afar,
Where sweet Celtic voices are ;
Wales, where music rules the land.
Yet upon this hither strand
Burns a brilliant sun at noon,
Beams a gentle midnight moon :
Life upon each mighty slope
Fights at noon, with fire of hope ;
Under the moon's dewy sky
Lives on dreaming memory.
And the embracing sea,
Sweet Earth ! still brings peace to me,
In thy solitariness.

From the ends of thee there come,
Over every ocean, home,
Thoughts of each man's loneliness ;
On the waves, down the strange wind.
Not one lone thought, but can find
Echo in some distant vale,
Where the deep gorge holds the gale :
Where the universal sun
Reigns, and moves the quiet moon :
Where one dreamer's hope hath won
Dreams at night of fair things done
In the spirit of strong noon.

KNIGHT OF THE NORTH.

To Edgar Prestage.

Is yonder sunlight sun indeed,
At turn of the green glade ?
Or glitters there an armoured steed
In covert, and a blade ?
I care not, save to make more speed :
I cannot be afraid :
Knight of the North ! who no man fears,
Riding with a plump of spears.

Above me, heartening winds at play :
Beneath me, the good ground :
There, lordly eagles go their way,
To mountain pastures bound :
While stars yet fade upon the day,
I ride the wild land round :
Knight of the North ! who no man fears,
Though the air be bright with spears.

Rare in my nostrils, the full earth
Pours perfume of the wood :

Over the hills, nigh mad with mirth,
Sweep storms to fire my blood :
Oh ! right true Northern is my birth,
Where but to breathe is good :
Knight of the North ! who no man fears,
Little needing, save stout spears.

But when the Chauntry, dark and cold,
Shall hide me among dust :
When lowly priests unmoved behold
Mine armour dim with rust :
Oh ! then, with foray as of old,
To feed a living lust !
Not to be one, whom no man fears,
Dead ! and dull, his flashing spears.

1890.

DEAD.

ALL in the wild West country,
Hard by the Severn Sea :
The blowing, lonely country,
A land of lands for thee :
Where the high purple headlands
Command the sea :

Oh, there in that vast valley,
Full within sight of Wales :
Deep in that mighty valley,
Among the great sea gales :
Whose voice across the waters
Travels from Wales ?

Blow back from the West country,
Back to the heart of Wales :
Back to that ancient country,
Across the sea, fierce gales !

Love and farewell eternal :
Far into Wales.

For thee the fair West country,
Headland and vale for thee :
No more the dearer country,
Wales beyond Severn Sea :
One lies in Merioneth,
Long lost to thee.

1889.

VESPERS.

SOLEMN, dark hills bastion pale,
Solemn reaches' of calm lake :
And night is nearing.
Stilly-souled you speak not, steering
Our light vessel toward the vale,
Where the ripples break.

See ! the vesper light : the star
Softest-fired of stars. Heaven fills :
Soon all the starry
Lights will flood all visionary
Haunted valley glooms, that are High among the hills.

How the last cries fall away
From the far and resting fields,
And linger faintly
Through the woodland glades : how saintly
Shows the death of this fair day ;
With what sad grace yields !

Only down the shoreland wails
A lone plover : down the mere
Her way is winging

A white owl. Else were there clinging
Perfect silence round our sails,
As you sit and steer.

IESU COR.

To the Rev. Father Browne, S. J.

QUID, Cor Iesu vulneratum !
Peccatorem me amasti ?
Iesu mei Cor amatum,
Cur pro me Te vulnerasti ?
Quare mihi Te indigno
Prodidisti Te in ligno ?

Angelorum Te in coelis
Collaudabant sanctae voces :
Trucibus Tu volens telis
Innocenti Tibi nocēs :
O quam miris illecebris
Me vocasti e tenebris !

Tuas meos in amores
Tu agonias mutasti :
Et purpureos in flores
Tua vulnera formasti :
Sanguinisque Tui fontes
Animas perfundunt fontes.

Iesu coronatum spinis
Cor ! peccati mei fiat
Et doloris Tui finis :
Meum cor Te solum sciat.
Hominis Tu Cor et Dei :
Cor Tu Salvatoris mei.

1893.

A DEATH.

To Reginald Brinton.

THE palms, the desert, the enchanted East,
Full of fire, burning with an ancient heat :
Those were my dreams of old ; now dreams have ceased,

The heart of that old world I hear not beat.
The joy, the calmness, of my soul lie there :
And death hath hallowed all, and made it clear.

We are alone, the loving dead and I :
In a still loneliness and peace profound,
Beside forgetful waters, the dead lie ;
By solemn laws to one calm habit bound.
And through the sunlight, and the enthralling heat,
I too am there : and find the silence sweet.

Cities and great wastes of the ancient East !
I dwell with you, where you have buried him.
Splendid, the way of death : your spears released
His soul ; his eyes saw England, and fell dim.
Now, under the vast silence, and the palm,
I trust him to your loneliness and calm.

Praise to the dead ! Love to the dead ! devotion
Be to the true and unforgetting dead !
Their measureless and stilly sleep, no motion
Stirs, but the strewing of each comer's bed.
Give lilies ! pour the balm ! Now all is over :
Death will the rest provide for his new lover.

1889.

GRACE.

To William Sharp.

THE moorland, the wild moorland knows !
Under these dragging clouds, beneath
These beaten pines, the secret grows
    To light within our souls.
Hark ! throughout Merioneth rolls
    Low thunder down the heath.

Where the vexed life of London drives
Her alien multitudes along :
Will moorland glory brace our lives,
    And make the dark hours clear ?
Yes ! for the lights on hill and mere,
    Our lit souls will prolong.

Silence, in the most weary stress
Of dinning street or brilliant room :
Pure memory, amid merciless
    Cares, and encumbering wants :
Silence and memory ! can the haunts
    Of London dusk their bloom ?

Then were life springless winter, wan
With heavy airs and all decay.
But paradisal yet is man,
    And natural life his charm.
Powerless are worldlier powers to harm,
    Who love the simpler way.

1888.

AT ETON.

To Charles Goodhart.

To have but just that youth once more,
How gladly would I give away.

All, the long years may hold in store !
How gladly, for that early day,
Give all, I have ! except, may be,
That day's eternal memory.

The boys, on whom I look, and sigh
To be no more, no more, as they ;
Might laugh to learn, that such as I,
Scarce older than themselves, can say
Such wistful things, that best beseem,
Surely, an old man's hopeless dream !

Old men would understand : they know,
What mighty change, one hour must make ;
When to the open world boys go,
And come not back, but turn and take
Their several ways to joy or ruth :
But never a way leads back to youth !

Years hence, your willing feet may find
These Fields beside the royal stream :
And mine will haunt, if fate prove kind,
My Winton Meads, and walk in dream :
But never, as in days of old ;
The days of youth ! the age of gold !

1889.

THE SILENT.

To Ralph Shirley.

SING to me, sing to me,
Voices of all my dead !
From under earth and sea
Send music up, and shed
Melody and memory
Around my dying head.

Once let me hear, ere death,
Your voices, O my friends !
Else will your welcoming breath
Make no true heart's amends
For my lone life beneath
Sad skies : once, ere life ends,

Let Death refine mine ears
To catch your thin, far airs :
Breathe from your shadowy spheres
One sigh, to soothe my cares ;
One thought, ere death appears,
Ere my worn spirit shares

Your fellowship of gloom.
To warn me of your black,
Chill pathway of the tomb,
Speak from that bitter track :
To mind me of their bloom,
From days of old come back !

1888.

THE GLOOM.

To Henry Hinkson.

Is the dark growing gray,
With the thought of the morn ?
Does the redness of day
Wait the word to be born ?
Has the sun in his splendour his wings on his way ?

Inisfail in the night,
With her eyes of desire,
Is athirst for the light,
For the fountain of fire :
And the stars of her doom seem to fade from her sight.

But the winds have a sigh,
The wise winds ! They are old :
They have swept the dark sky,
And the stars they have told,
Star by star, through the ages : the stars shall not die !

They shall live : and the wrongs
Of their working shall live :
And a sadness of songs
Is the best, they shall give.
Inisfail down the night a fair sorrow prolongs.

RIGHT AND MIGHT.

To Dr. Mark Ryan.

SAD is the cry of the wind on the wastes of the sea :
Sadder the sigh of our hearts, Eire ! for thee.
Swift and fierce the lance of the lightning flies ;
More swift, more fierce, our wrath, till thine anguish dies.

Who shall stay the surge of the tireless tide ?
He, who shall stay our march, and none else beside.
Who shall still the skies, when the thunders roar ?
Only he, who shall still our storm of war.

Heart of our hearts, Eire ! thou hast the right :
Heart of our hearts ! it is thou shalt have the might.
Nay ! since thine is the right, this day art thou
Mightier far than the foe, that wrongs thee now.

Be it this year, or be it a thousand hence,
They shall vanish, who do thee violence.
God from His Heavens can bid the sun withdraw :
But not His infinite justice ! not His Law !
1896.

THE SLEEP OF WILL.

STEAL sleep over enchanted eyes,
And sleep over charmed ears :
Sealed be the wellsprings of all tears,
Hushed be all sighs.

Through fingers, long, and thin, and white,
Over your face shall creep
Spells of unfathomable sleep,
A perfect night.

Oh, to the chambers of your brain,
The chambers of your soul,
Those hands will call, and still control,
Sleep, soft as rain.

Were but to me that soul of thine
So vassal, evermore :
Your will were mightier than before,
Made one with mine.

NIHILISM.

To Samuel Smith.

AMONG immortal things not made with hands ;
Among immortal things, dead hands have made :
Under the Heavens, upon the Earth, there stands
Man's life, my life : of life I am afraid.

Where silent things, and unimpassioned things,
Where things of nought, and things decaying, are :
I shall be calm soon, with the calm, death brings.
The skies are gray there, without any star.

Only the rest ! the rest ! Only the gloom,
Soft and long gloom ! The pausing from all thought !

My life, I cannot taste : the eternal tomb
Brings me the peace, which life has never brought.

For all the things I do, and do not well ;
All the forced drawings of a mortal breath :
Are as the hollow music of a bell,
That times the slow approach of perfect death.
1888.

THE RED MOON.

To T. H. McLachlan.

THRONED upon golden fires, and queen of night,
Queen of enamoured night ! whose mortal heart
Draws thine, Immortal ? Not on Latmus height
Thou burnest : thence no shepherds now depart
Homeward at sundown under the flushed pines,
All, save one solitary left for thee :
For whom hast thou enriched thy lily light
With redness of dark roses ? Still thou art
That victress, in whose deity combines
With swift love, swifter scorn : so thou art free.

Throned upon crystal air, thou wilt return
With solemn light upon the morrow's dew :
No more thine heart, an heart of snow, will burn ;
Nor thou thy passionate employ renew.
Nay ! thou among the stars thy tranquil way
Wilt take, with steps of silence and of calm :
No Latmus among mountains wilt discern,
No sad Endymion from the shepherd crew :
And, slowly passing onward to the day,
Thou wilt seem one, whom vestal thoughts embalm.

So thou art free. So art thou hard to love :
Whether thou flameest red from out the deep,

Or dost in virginal procession move,
Blessing the lands with universal sleep.
Yet, splendour of the night ! be thy lone will
Done thee, so thou preserve thy fair estate !
Proud power of calm ! whose majesties reprove
The souls that wanton, and the hearts that weep.
We hail thee, gracious or disdainful, still :
And this thy full uprising celebrate.

1889.

COUNSEL.

To Edward Warren.

MILKY pearls of India
For the braiding of her hair :
Spice from swart Arabia
For the fragrance of her air :
Coil the pure pearls, wake the sweet spells,
Let lutes and hollow shells
Flatter her, fair, if morn be fair.

Stay, no more ! Bring not to her
Golden lore of poetry :
Not on those dark eyes confer
Glories of antiquity.
What wouldest thou ? She loves too much,
To feel the solemn touch
Of Plato's thought, that masters thee.

She hath drunken wizard dew,
Where the secret faeries dance :
She hath watched the sylvan crew,
When the forests take the glance
Of the white moon : and she is thine.
Could Plato's eyes divine
A soul in her wild countenance ?

1887.

VICTORY.

To George Moore.

DOWN the white steps, into the night, she came ;
Wearing white roses, lit by the full moon :
And white upon the shadowy lawn she stood,
Waiting and watching for the dawn's first flame,
Over the dark and visionary wood.
Down the white steps, into the night, she came ;
Wearing white roses, lit by the full moon.

Night died away : and over the deep wood
Widened a rosy cloud, a chilly flame :
The shadowy lawn grew cold, and clear, and white.
Then down she drew against her eyes her hood,
To hide away the inexorable light.
Night died away : and over the deep wood
Widened a rosy cloud, a chilly flame.

Then back she turned, and up the white steps came,
And looked into a room of burning lights.
Still slept her loveless husband his brute sleep,
Beside the comfortless and ashen flame :
Her lover waited, where the wood was deep.
She turned not back : but from the white steps came,
And went into the room of burning lights.

1888.

EVENING IN WALES.

To Hubert Cornish.

LAUGHING at our cold despair,
Spring is come : laud we her name !
Out into this gentler air,
Musical with breath that came
Over seas and islands, where
Suns have fragrance in their flame :

Come with me, and let soft wind
Soothe the chambers of your mind.

Starrier anemones,
Than rich southern woods enfold ;
Heavenlier coloured primroses,
Than fair southern maids behold ;
Hushed by Alun's cadences,
Kinglier marsh marigold :
Seeing these, be proud to praise
Wales with all her flowered ways.

With no grace of Cyclad peaks,
Gleaming crowns for seas of light ;
Moel Fammau darkling seeks
Converse with the coming night :
Purple shadowed, how she breaks
The red splendours, out of sight
Fading, until dewy morn
Bid them with new fire be born !

1886.

TIMON.

To Ronald Burrows.

PROSPER but the wintry cold,
I shall hail a wealth of woe.
Race the rivers, then stand still :
Ice be, what was torrent flow :
Forest ways turn iron mould :
Grow the windy weather chill
More and more, and snows enfold
House and field and garden. So
Winter comes : and such my will.

Has my heart grown overbold,
That its bitterness must show

Open choice of ill for ill?
Yet when old wrongs to and fro
Pace my heart, and sting and scold;
Some way must their wrath distil
Some relief; their tale be told:
That the empty air may know,
The fierce winds, and sullen hill.

I was young, and now am old:
Yet, as to the dark I go,
Livelier springs my want to kill
Kindness, as the sickles mow
Good red corn: as through the wold
Sweep the dreary winds, and spill,
Where young lovers lately strolled,
Yellow leaves; and joy to blow,
Where they whispered, harsh and shrill.
1887.

UPON READING CERTAIN POEMS.

I COME, a lost wind from the shores
Of wondering dull misery:
With muttered echoes, heartsick plaints,
And sullen sorrows, filling me.
But all this flowery world abhors
Me, wretched wind and heavy cloud:
Beneath me, as beneath a shroud,
The spirit of summer faints.

The golden angel of delight
Gleams past me, and I shrink away:
A dimness on the dawn am I,
A mist upon the merry day.
Here should be none but Muses bright,
Whose airs go delicately sweet:
With swallow wings, and faery feet,
Eager to dance or fly.

I will drift back to Wearyland,
To wondering dull misery :
No champaign rich, nor rosy lawn,
Shall wither by the fault of me.
Where no one takes loved hand in hand,
But with his shadow crawls alone :
They miss the comfort of my moan,
My melancholy long-drawn.

1887.

GUARDIAN ANGELS.

To Alfred Ferrand.

SAFELY, across the ocean track,
O Angel of my friend !
Bear him, and swiftly bear him back :
My loss, his exile, end.
With white wings, mighty and unseen,
Be Guardian of him still, as thou hast been.

Make kind to him the Afric sun,
The Afric stars and moon :
Then, when our Mayflower has begun
To prophesy of June ;
Give us himself, lest summer be
Sorrow for lack of him : ah, promise me !

Thee, O his Angel ! mine implores
In tenderness to me :
Far flashing toward those southern shores,
Mine Angel pleads with thee,
Saying : My charge is friend to thine :
Guard thou him well, or I have fears for mine.

1894.

DOMINICA IN PALMIS.

To Aubrey Beardsley.

PASSIO cantatur Christi :
Iesu ! qui nos redemisti,
Victor mortuus in cruce :
Fac nos solum contemplari
Te, qui solus es amari
Dignus, victor stans in luce.

Israel quem laudant psalmis
Regem celebrantes palmis,
Morti dabunt mox Iudaei :
Tantum vitae largitorem
Teneamus nos amorem
Nostrum, ne maioris rei.

Per Calvariae tremendam
Passionem, semper flendam
Cum Maria desolata :
Pastor bone ! Victor vere !
Triumphantem da videre
Te, cum Matre coronata.

1893.

UNION.

WERT thou forthwith to die :

Were I

To linger toward a solitary death,

With ever mournful breath :

What life were that of mine,

Forlorn of thine ?

Were I to leave thee now :

Wert thou

To keep, the maiden mate of loneliness,

Long vigils of distress .

Yet happier life were thine,
Released from mine.

We will not therefore part,
Dear heart !
Thy spiritual fire shall quicken me,
And fit me all for thee :
That thy soul may be mine,
And my soul thine.

1887.

WESTWARD.

To Roger Fry.

WHITE Land within the West,
Upon the breast
Of some divine and windless sea :
One of thy musing ghosts make me,
Glad and at rest.

White leaves of poplar there
Move to an air,
Gracious, and musical, and kind :
Under those leaves, let me too find
The cure of care.

But chiefly for their sake,
Whom thou didst take ;
Lost to me in thine heart, White Land !
Soon bid me sleep, soon hand in hand
With them to wake.

1894.

COLLINS.

To C. W. Holgate.

THROUGH glades and glooms ! Oh, fair ! Oh, sad !
The paths of song, that led through these
Thy feet, that once were free and glad
To wander beneath Winton trees !
Now in soft shades of sleep they tread
By ways and waters of the dead.

There tender Otway walks with thee,
And Browne, not strange among the dead :
By solemn sounding waters ye,
By willow vallies, gently led,
Think on old memories of her,
Courtly and cloistral Winchester.

So memory's mingled measure flows,
In shadowy dream and twilight trance :
Past death, to dawn of manhood, goes
Thy spirit's unforgetting glance ;
Through glades and glooms ! And hails at last
The lovely scenes long past : long past.

1888.

TE MARTYRUM CANDIDATUS.

To the Very Rev. John Canon O'Hanlon.

AH, see the fair chivalry come, the companions of Christ !
White Horsemen, who ride on white horses, the Knights of God !
They, for their Lord and their Lover who sacrificed
All, save the sweetness of treading, where He first trod !

These through the darkness of death, the dominion of
night,
Swept, and they woke in white places at morning tide :
They saw with their eyes, and sang for joy of the sight,
They saw with their eyes the Eyes of the Crucified.

Now, whithersoever He goeth, with Him they go :
White Horsemen, who ride on white horses, oh fair to see !
They ride, where the Rivers of Paradise flash and flow,
White Horsemen, with Christ their Captain : for ever
He !

1895.

IN A COPY OF MR. GOSSE'S IN RUSSET AND SILVER.

VALETE, fas est, flores ! vale, ver !
Venit severiore Musa vi :
Post rosas appropinquans frugifer
Autumnus donis benedicit mi.

Dat cor tranquillum, suam pacem dat ;
Dat lyrae pleniora psallere :
Adiutor mihi Deus ipse stat
Musagetes benigno carmine.

Quid mi cum lacrimis ? sic spiritus
Divinior delectat animam :
Sic surgit vita de mortalibus
Gloriis ad coelestem gloriam.

1894.

CORNWALL.

To Victor Collier.

O HAUNTED moorlands, haunted heights,
Beloved by haunted wind and sea !
Your dreams have been my long delights,
Your voices have rung clear to me.

O land of ghostly loveliness !
At thy gray Crosses kneeling, I
Fear nought of death : my strong joys press
Far beyond death, and long to die :

To die, and after fire to live
Evermore white and perfected.
Mine the vast faith, that thou canst give :
Thou, and thine immemorial dead.

1894.

HAWKER OF MORWENSTOW.

To Mrs. Dalton.

STRONG Shepherd of thy sheep, pastors of the sea ;
Far on the Western marge, thy passionate Cornish land !

Oh, that from out thy Paradise thou could'st thine hand

Reach forth to mine, and I might tell my love to thee !
For one the faith, and one the joy, of thee and me,
Catholic faith and Celtic joy : I understand
Somewhat, I too, the Messengers from Sion strand ;
The voices and the visions of the Mystery.

Ah, not the Chaunt alone was thine : thine too the Quest !

And at the last the Sangraal of the Paschal Christ

Flashed down its fair red Glory to those dying eyes :
They closed in death, and opened on the Victim's Breast.

Now, while they look for ever on the Sacrificed,
Remember, how thine ancient race in twilight lies !
1895.

MOTHER ANN.

To George Barton.

WHITE were the ardours of thy soul, O wan Ann
Lee !

Thou spirit of fine fire for every storm to shake !
They shook indeed the quivering flame, yet could not make

Its passionate light expire, but only make it flee :
Over the vast, the murmuring, the embittered sea,
Driven, it gleamed : no agonies availed to break
That burning heart, so hot for heavenly passion's sake ;
The heart, that beat, and burned, and agonized, in thee !

Thou knewest not : yet thine was altar flame astray ;
Poor exiled, wandering star, that might have stayed and stood

Hard by the Holy Host, close to the Holy Rood,
Illumining the great one Truth, one Life, one Way !
O piteous pilgrim pure amid night's sisterhood :
For thee doth Mother Mary, Star of Morning, pray !
1896.

MÜNSTER : A.D. 1534.

To R. Ashe King.

WE are the golden men, who shall the people save :
For only ours are visions, perfect and divine ;

And we alone have drunken of the last, best wine ;
And very Truth our souls hath flooded, wave on wave.
Come, wretched death's inheritors, who dread the grave!

Come! for upon our brows is set the starry sign
Of prophet, priest, and king : star of the lion line :
Leave Abana, leave Pharpar, and in Jordan lave !

It thundered, and we heard : it lightened, and we saw :
Our hands have torn in twain the Tables of the Law :
Sons of the Spirit, we know nothing now of sin.

Come! from the Tree of Eden take the mystic fruit :
Come! pluck up God's own knowledge by the abysmal
root :

Come! you, who would the Reign of Paradise begin.
1896.

DOCTOR MAJOR.

To Dr. Birkbeck Hill.

WHY, no, Sir! If a barren rascal cries,
That he is most in love with pleasing woe,
'Tis plain, Sir! what to think of him: We know
The dog lies; and the dog, too, knows he lies.
Sir! if he's happy, he will dry his eyes,
And stroll at Vauxhall for an hour or so:
If he's unhappy, it were best he go
Hang himself straight, nor pester us with sighs.

Enough, Sir! Let us have no more of it:
Your friend is little better than a Whig.
But you and I, Sir, who are men of wit,
Laugh at the follies of a canting prig.
Let those who will, Sir! to such whims submit:
No, Sir! we'll to the Mitre: Frank! my wig.
1891.

QUISQUE SUOS MANES.

To Charles-Marie Garnier.

WHAT have you seen, eyes of strange fire ! What have you seen,
Far off, how far away ! long since, so long ago !
To fill you with this jewel flame, this frozen glow :
Haunted and hard, still eyes, malignant and serene ?
In what wild place of fear, what Pan's wood, have you been,
That struck your lustrous rays into a burning snow ?
What agonies were yours ? What never equalled woe ?
Eyes of strange fire, strange eyes of fire ! on what dread scene ?

Smitten and purged, you saw the red deeps of your sin :
You saw there death in life ; you will see life in death.
The sunlight shrank away, the moon came wan and thin,
Among the summer trees the sweet winds held their breath.
Now those celestial lights, which you can never win,
Haunt you, and pierce, and blind. The Will of God so saith.

1890.

MASTERY.

IF thou wouldst be a master, learn the way :
Little thou knowest of that sacred joy,
Which haunts the deep of night, and fills the day,
And makes a warrior of a dreaming boy.

To love the austerity of sea and stars :
To love the multitudes of mighty towns :
To love the hardness of thy prison bars :
This must thou know, or lose the eternal crowns.

Bear to be last, though the world's fools were first ;
Endure the wealth and wage, thy service brings :
Wages enough, heart's hunger and soul's thirst,
And blessedness beyond the pride of kings.

Knowest thou this ? And holds thy purpose still ?
Praise thou thy God, O servant of His Will !

1891.

FLOS FLORUM.

To Mrs. Hinkson.

Lily, O Lily of the Vallies !
Lily, O Lily of Calvary Hill !
White with the glory of all graces,
Earth with the breath of thy pure soul fill :
Lily, O Lily of the Vallies !
Lily, O Lily of Calvary Hill !

Rose, O Rose of Gethsemani Garden !
Rose of the Paradise : Mystical Rose !
From thickets of the thornless Eden,
Load with rich odour each wind that blows :
Rose, O Rose of Gethsemani Garden !
Rose of the Paradise : Mystical Rose !

1894.

CULVER CLIFF.

To Bruce Richmond.

THE one sail on the wild gray sea !
Far down, the rough and churning surge
Leaps up the cliff, and freshens me
With flying spray upon the verge ;
The bastion verge, whereon I stand,

To see one solitary sail
Full blown upon a shrieking gale ;
To watch the unconvoyed vessel urge
Her voyage to an unknown land.

Thou one sail on the wild gray sea !
Far out strange thunder broods, and all
The restless ocean plucks at thee :
Fierce winds would have thy mast to fall,
The swooping winds, that work their will.
Fare thee well, little sail ! Meseems,
Thou wilt pass prospering through my dreams,
This night : though purple heavens appal,
Though winds and waters fight their fill.

1887.

PROPHETA GENTIUM.

To Arthur Christopher Benson.

PROPHET VIRGIL ! thou,
White, and sweet, and stern :
Dante's Master ! now
Tell us : may we learn
More than he, whose brow
Bare that dread brand, set there, thou knowest how !
Tremendous to discern ?

Nothing more ! And yet,
This thing more know we :
That thy throne is set
High, where high Saints be.
Thy song soaring met
David's, Isaiah's : how should God forget,
O thou His prophet ! thee ?

1896.

CHILD OF WAR.

To H. R. Beddoes.

HER ivory face, quivering but trembling not,
Upheld against a sky of angry storm ;
She stands upon her savage chariot,
Fronting the field of Death, a silent form.
The eagles' daughter, this day she forgot
Pity and peace for the first time, and went
To watch the waves of war break, and be spent.

Homeward, with shadows passing on her face,
Strange lights with strange tears battling in her eyes ;
She goes the triumph way of her old race,
Watching the eagles gather in the skies.
Tasted hath she this day death's busy place :
And in her heart called up to equal fight,
Daughter of eagles, loathing and delight.

1887.

THE END.

To Austin Ferrand.

I GAVE you more than love : many times more :
I gave mine honour into your fair keeping.
You lost mine honour : wherefore now restore
The love, I gave ; not dead, but cold and sleeping.
You loveless, I dishonoured, go our ways :
Dead is the past : dead must be all my days.

Death and the shadows tarry not : fulfil
Your years with folly and love's imitation.
You had mine all : mine only now, to kill
All trembling memories of mine adoration.
That done, to lie me down, and die, and dream,
What once, I thought you were : what still, you seem.

1887.

LATE LOVE.

WHEN I had thought to make an home with sorrow,
A gentle, melancholy dwelling ;
And there to linger life with telling
Over old fancies of some fair to-morrow :
Sudden, there broke about my way
Laughter, and flowers, and break of day.

Sing, Guardian Angel ! One is come, who takes me
Home to the land of loving voices :
And there my risen heart rejoices
To tell each sorrow over, that forsakes me ;
And all the unimagined songs,
That a child's carolling voice prolongs.

1887.

OLD SILVER.

BEHOLD, what thrones of the Most High
Are here within the common mart !
True God hath entered
These crystal-centred,
Silvern stars : Men ! come and buy,
If you have the heart !

Melt down the royal throne, break up
The sanctuary of Deity !
Is then God's glory
So transitory,
Mortal men ? Christ ! is Thy Cup
But a memory ?

1887.

WINDERMERE.

To Edward Marsh.

SAILS on the trembling lake,
White sails! far out at sea
Your glistening road should be :
Spaces of snow, to break
The pearly, pure sea line.

Sails on the inland bay,
Red sails! your road should be
Rounding some cape at sea :
Russet wings, on your way
Brightening the gray sea waves.

1888.

JULY.

To More Adey.

SUMMER lightning, and rich rain :
Roses perfume the hot air.
All the breathless night is faint,
All the flowery night is fair.
Philomel her joy or plaint
Sings, and sings, and sings again.

What comes now? The earth awaits
What fierce wonder from those skies?
Thunder, trampling through the night?
Morning, with illustrious eyes?
Morning, from the springs of light :
Thunder, round Heaven's opening gates.

1889.

AD PATRONUM.

NONDUM clamantis in deserto vox,
Nondum Baptista tu, Ioannule !
Nondum stelligera te vestit nox :
Et ecce ! Iesulinus visit te.

Per dulcem istam pueritiam,
Ora, patrone mi ! ora pro me :
Ut tecum in aeternum videam
Natum pro nobis, mi Ioannule !

1896.

LOVE'S WAYS.

You were not cruel always ! Nay,
When I said Come ! one year ago :
Could you have lingered by the way ?
Did not the very wind seem slow ?

Then, had you tarried, I had known
Nor love's delight, nor lost love's pain :
Then, always had I lived alone.
Now, you need never come again.

1887.

CHANCES.

To Miss Althea Gyles.

To some, it is all easy : Day and Night
Fight on the side of some,
With dreams, and the accomplishment of dreams :
Warfaring as they will, they overcome.

To me all hours oppose the unequal fight :
Night, with dreams : Day makes war,
With wakening of despair ; with hope, that gleams
In vain, upon the cloudy hills, too far.

1887.

SEASONS.

To Arthur Symons.

SEE the radiance, hear the trump of summer !
From your hot grass worship
The red roses, thirsty through the thunder,
For a cooling rain !

See the wan land, hear the cry of winter !
From your cold walks wonder
At white snowfields, desolate through the sadness,
For the sun again !

1888.

CHALKHILL.

From his Latin epitaph in the Cloisters of Winchester College.

HERE lies John Chalkhill : years two score,
A Fellow here, and then, no more !
Long life, of chaste and sober mood,
Of silence and of solitude ;
Of plenteous alms, of plenteous prayer,
Of sanctity and inward care :
So lived the Church's early fold,
So saintly anchorites of old.
A little child, he did begin
The Heaven of Heavens by storm to win :
At eighty years he entered in.

1887.

WINCHESTER.

To Campbell Dodgson.

AT thought of thee, the old words come :
The old Eia ! quid silemus ?
Then, Dulce Domum resonemus !

For thou art our true Home.
Praises of thee,
From such as we,
Thy children, well beseem us.

Great, among many great and free ;
Of many fair, the fairest :
England's reward of praise thou sharest,
With sisters worthy thee :
But first-born thou,
Who stateliest now
The crown of ages wearest.

Thou hast the winning of all hearts :
All the whole wide world over,
In every son thou hast a lover,
Won by thy loving arts :
Good men and true,
All the world through,
Who loved thee, far graves cover.

Though weariness, full hard to bear,
Should fill me many a morrow :
Mine yet, old joys of thee to borrow,
And thoughts of days, that were.
To know me thine,
And know thee mine,
Could comfort many a sorrow.

Our thought of thee is as the thought
Of dawn, when nights are bitter :
The shadowy world begins to glitter ;
And lo ! the sun hath brought
Bright flames to birth ;
While dewy earth
Thrills at the birds' clear twitter.

Our joy in thee is as the joy
Of bells, when airs are stilly :
Through pastures lone, down moorlands hilly,
They ply their grave employ :
Peace lulls the day,
Rest soothes the way ;
Hearts glow, that late were chilly.

A place of friends ! a place of books !
A place of good things olden !
With these delights, the years were golden ;
And life wore sunny looks.
They fled at last :
But to that past
Am I in all beholden.

A place of friends indeed ! And age
Such friendship only mellows :
And, as our autumn slowly yellows,
Defies the wintry rage.
Good luck befall
You, one and all,
The best of all good fellows !

Soft twilights of enchanted June,
Gray Courts, green Meads, embracing !
Side by side wandered we, slow pacing,
Till silvered rise of moon :
By Oxford towers
Come scarce such hours,
Her Quads and Gardens gracing.

O Cloister Time, beyond compare,
On Hills, down Meads, down River !
When summer magic could deliver
The soul from every care !
That was to live :
And thanks we give
To Winchester, the giver.

Days of May blossom and June heat,
When all the ways were fragrant !
How good it was to play the vagrant,
Over the country sweet !
The long hours through,
In skies, how blue !
The mighty sun stood flagrant.

And ah, those hours of glorious life,
On Playing Fields of Eton !
No better field for foes to meet on,
Foes in a friendly strife.
A right fair place,
With right good grace,
To be beaten, or to beat on.

When Term dies down to Domum Day,
And last farewells draw nearer :
Fairer grows Winchester, and dearer,
To those, who must away.
Gather then round !
Send the old sound
To the heart of every hearer !

Calm glide the streams through Water Meads ;
Calmly stand Hills above them.
Hark to the song of those, who love them !
How the old music pleads !
Come, what may come :
No sweeter Home
To deeper love shall move them.

But limes are rich in flower, and bees
Make hum, and August follows :
Away we go, like Daulian swallows,
Far from our towers and trees.
Past the way flies,
Where College lies,
Alone in her ancient hollows.

Back too, like birds from overseas,
Birds of a common feather,
Gladly we flock again together,
Back to our towers and trees.
College in sight !
Hills! gently bright
In the golden autumn weather.

And then, each heartening winter day :
When patriot zeal arouses,
In College, Commoners, and Houses,
The spirit of the fray !
Time to begin !
Ah, what glad din
Beneath the wintry boughs is !

Only nine years, but nine ago ;
Could dearer rank befall me ?
With joy I won the right to call me
A College Junior : so
All those good things,
Tom Warton sings,
Were waiting to enthrall me.

How fair the ancient city shone,
That best of red Septembers !
How well my haunted heart remembers
That evening, nine years gone !
O faces bright
With ruddy light !
O dreams beside the embers !

Proud pleasure, beneath Wykeham's roof,
That first of six years' slumbers !
What dreams, more dear than poets' numbers,
Clung round those walls age-proof !
Such dreams as those,
No grown man knows :
No care, nor want, encumbers.

Before us, years that charmed full well :
Five centuries behind us.
So past with future strove to bind us,
Each with its mighty spell.
O fond debate !
No cruel fate,
To either, false shall find us.

Then, with the rising of the sun,
From dreams, to day-dreams woken :
We sang Iam Lucis : happy token
For our new life begun :
Heirs of old race,
In that fair place :
One fellowship unbroken.

O pleasant, tranquil time secure !
O comfortable season !
For faith in youth is nature's reason,
Though youth may not endure.
Use, while you may,
The summer day :
Distrust at dawn is treason.

Far off, the battling world was loud,
The cries of war resounded :
In peace our Paradise abounded,
Far from the madding crowd.
Our happier dream,
No angry gleam,
Nor turbulent noise, confounded.

Youth is to love the air of noon,
In virginal clear May time :
The joyous light and heat of haytime,
The full red harvest moon :
To make earth's field
Those first flowers yield,
Which far outlive life's playtime.

O men of sterner stuff! You blame
Light leisure's poor musician?
Your youth was restless with ambition?
Your summer was all flame?
You on your past
May look at last,
Wistful with vain contrition.

Know you not, Manners Makyth Man?
O toil and task laborious!
Yet issue forth at last victorious,
Men of a simple plan:
But vexing haste,
And leisure's waste,
Prove graceless and inglorious.

Peace be with you! and let me muse:
Let mind and senses wander
Back to the perfect Home, far yonder!
The fragrant summer dews
Are falling there!
Me no such air
Charms, while I sit and ponder.

Campbell! do you remember still,
How, nine years gone, we breasted
A storm of storms, where pine trees crested
The ridge of snowy hill?
Cold winds and strong
Drove us along:
And wildly well we jested!

And how, through all the country side,
We talked, much like our betters,
Of right and wrong, in arts and letters,
Wanderers far and wide?
Then thought was free;
So young were we,
With years, that feel no fetters.

Would, I still wore the long black gown,
In cloistral habit vested :
Would, that all thoughts and cares I rested,
Dreaming on Twyford Down :
Glad but to mark,
How the clear lark,
Singing, the sunlight breasted !

On Hills to lie, some endless hour,
Watching the stream wind slowly
Through verdant Water Meads, past holy
Saint Cross, the grayheads' bower :
While lone Downs brood
In quietude,
And gentle melancholy.

Here walked, by each fair river path,
Good Brothers of the Angle :
Whose sweet thoughts knew to disentangle
Peace from the days of wrath :
Here Walton went,
Here Chalkhill spent
Calm hours, untaught to wrangle.

And many an haunt I think on now,
Where first I learned to savour
True verse, that won the old world's favour ;
Read on some lonely brow,
That overlooks
Old village nooks,
With names of homely flavour.

Chilcomb or Compton : loved far more,
Than those famed Hinkseys double :
Though none hath taken the sweet trouble,
To sing their simple store
Of pastoral joys :
Their wildest noise,
Birds whirring from the stubble.

Still dwell they, where of old they dwelt,
The Muses and the Graces :
We, in their olden, holy places,
We too their influence felt :
We too have been
Their friends, and seen
The sunlight on their faces.

Here was their court : each Muse and Grace
Found votaries full willing :
One prompted to the Splendid Shilling,
And one inspired the Chace :
And one found here
A bard austere ;
His Night with grave Thoughts filling.

Here, beneath Winton trees, first breathed
A faery lyre enchanted :
Ah, Collins ! at what cost was granted
To thee the laurel, wreathed
With faery flowers,
At moonlit hours
Plucked in wild woodlands haunted !

Still round the Cloisters, airs of Death
Wander, and touch the dreamer :
Music of Death, tired man's redeemer !
Rest thee, lie down ! it saith.
Who rested here,
Death's lover were :
Death's friend, not Death's blasphemers.

Thy Browne, who saw the ages pass
In funeral procession ;
Whose eyes explored Death's vast possession ;
Was it thy holy grass,
And Chauntry dim,
First called on him
To make his soul's Confession ?

Here first, perchance, thoughts filled his breast,
Memorial, monumental :
The ancient mysteries oriental ;
Faiths of the whiter West :
Dark pagan nights ;
Fair Christian rites,
The Dirge and Masses Trental.

Eton's great Provost, Wotton, came,
Enriched with courtly glory ;
And, calling back his youth's old story,
He found thee still the same :
All things were so,
Se puero :
He alone, changed and hoary.

For five last months retired, he gave
His soul to contemplation ;
His memory to meditation ;
Then all, unto the grave :
To Eton's trust,
His reverend dust :
Share we his veneration.

When Death comes nigh, and thoughts grow sad,
And all the skies look dreary :
When other places all are weary,
Save thee, the ever glad :
Sweet will it be
To visit thee,
With an Homeward Heus Rogere !

Timely would shine our Morning Star :
No need, with voices fretful,
To call that herald light forgetful :
Phosphore ! quid iubar ?
And Hesperus
Would bring to us,
Calm twilight, unregretful.

There would we roam, and haply quote
Some old, well-proven poet :
Plain truth, as Horace loves to show it,
Or Virgil's holier note :
Round us, the noise
Of just such boys,
As we were : could they know it !

Ah ! fast and dark they lengthen out,
The shadows on the dial :
Winter and age brook no denial,
Nor leave us long in doubt.
Through their bleak hours,
What withered flowers
Put memory on her trial !

Whose face flashed there ? What voice was that,
Voice, that comes back and lingers ?
Whose hand touched mine with flying fingers ?
Whose laugh is this, whereat
Down the dim track
Old joys come back,
And songs of long-lost singers ?

Up Hills our years would find the climb,
That grassy climb, grown steeper :
We'd rest in Trench ; and Trench was deeper,
We'd fancy, in our time :
Then, passing Maze,
To turn and gaze,
Tranced, like a dreaming sleeper !

The mountainous Cathedral gray ;
College, so fairly towered ;
And Wolvesey ruins ivy-bowered ;
And West Gate, far away :
Silent and still,
To gaze our fill,
By memory overpowered !

O Venta ! Caer Gwent ! great and glad
Wast thou, ere Saxon yeoman,
Ere nobler Normandy's mailed bowman,
Saw thee : Apollo had
His temple bright
Of song and light,
Here, when the world was Roman.

And wert thou Camelot ? Wert thou
That shrine of all things knightly ?
Through the dark shrouding mists, how brightly
Those glories flash forth now !
High chivalry,
Fair courtesy,
Enriching Winton rightly.

Surely the magic of the Celt,
White City ! doth not fail thee :
Whatever change and chance assail thee,
Still is that spirit felt :
That ancient grace
Still haunts thy face ;
And long may it avail thee.

Where reigned Apollo, Wykeham trod,
Child of a Saxon peasant :
Surely, Apollo still was present,
The old world's goodliest god :
Light's king, and song's,
His reign prolongs,
Throned in a place so pleasant.

On this trenched hill, new come from sea,
The robber Danes have clustered ;
On yonder hill, have Roundheads mustered,
Oliver's Battery :
Oh ! blade, and ball,
And crossbow, all
Down Itchen vale have blustered !

But dearest far of all to us,
Our College ! we confess thee :
Scarce can our simple love address thee ;
Silent, we greet thee thus.
While far above,
With perfect love,
Thy vanished children bless thee.

Sweet Home, whose excellent delight
Grows with the growing ages :
Nor sons untrue, nor martial rages,
Have spoiled thee to our sight :
Nurtured by thee,
Time yet shall see
Thy singers and thy sages.

A royal spirit lives in thee,
So loftily descended :
Through five great centuries attended,
By true posterity :
Sons on each hand,
Safe thou dost stand,
So plenteously befriended.

With thee my verse begins : thy name
My verse with music closes.
If sounds, like odours of old roses,
Recall, whence first they came :
My verse, may be,
To thoughts of thee
Some hearts of thine disposes.

But vain all song : what need of me,
To sing thee and to praise thee ?
No chaunted thanksgiving pourtrays thee,
Limen amabile !
Enough, to own
One praise alone :
His, whose right hand could raise thee.

Only, how hard to stay your flow,
Old memories of pleasure !
O years of everlasting treasure !
O life of light and glow !
Youth was in flower :
Hope was in power ;
Hope, without pause or measure.

Ah, fare you well ! ah, fare you well !
Dear years of youth and laughter !
Who knows, what time may bring hereafter ?
Whose tongue can fate foretell ?
Nay ! let that pass :
Fill up the glass,
With Auld Lang Syne to the rafter !

And, Omnibus Wiccamicis !
To honour one another,
Becomes the children of one mother ;
A mother, such as this !
Honour, and health,
And righteous wealth,
To brother and to brother !

Ah, truest, sweetest, commonplace !
True lovers nought can sever :
Our love to thee, then, falters never,
Dear mother of our race !
Wykehamists, we Cry, Hail to thee !
With a love, that lasts for ever.

Wykeham ! to whom our joys are due,
Shall we not fall before thee ?
Love thee, and thank thee, and adore thee,
With passionate praises true ?
What she too owes
To thee, well knows
The motherland, that bore thee !

Year after year, to honour thee,
Thy Wykehamists will gather :
Not strangers, young and old ; nay, rather
One loving family :
Thy name, a bond
All ties beyond :
Our Founder and our Father !

Before thine altar tomb we fall,
The silence growing vaster :
Our Founder, Father, gracious Master !
Thine always, one and all :
Thine ! and as days
Grow, so thy praise
But firmer grows and faster.

Winchester ! Home, to whom our hearts,
Full of glad memories, take us :
Let all else fail, thou wilt forsake us
Never : and though time parts
Us from thy side,
We still abide
The lovers, thou didst make us.

Lovers : for we have known thee well,
And love thee, since we know thee.
But how with heart and soul to show thee
Our love, we cannot tell.
Ah ! may we be
But worthy thee :
Or evermore forgo thee.

Now once more let the old words come,
The old Eia ! quid silemus ?
Now, Dulce Domum resonemus !
For love of thee, Sweet Home !
Vivas et stes !
Te indies
Amantius amemus.

"FULL of delicate fancy, and display much lyrical grace and felicity."—Times.

"An air of solidity, combined with something also of severity, is the first impression one receives from these pages. Not only is the number of pieces which the book contains far greater than is now the fashion to publish at one time, but the poems themselves are more massive than most lyrics are; they aim at dignity, and attain it. This is, we believe, the first book of verse that Mr. Johnson has published by himself; and one would say, on a first reading, that, for a first book, it was remarkably mature. And so it is in its accomplishment, its reserve of strength, its unfaltering style. . . . If we are not content with the obvious merit of such work as this, if we are exacting of entire success, it is because Mr. Johnson's verse is so high above the average that it challenges the test of a high standard. Mr. Johnson's future interests us even more than his work hitherto; for, whatever form his writing takes, it will be the expression of a rich mind and a rare talent."—Saturday Review.

"These poems, if I mistake not, have been . . . looked forward to with great interest by a good many people . . . nor do I think that the book will be a disappointment to any. . . . The Dark Angel, a poem of quite extraordinary power. . . . But if we are bidden to choose the most perfect and enjoyable verses in the book, I would unhesitatingly vote for Sertorius. Mr. Johnson has done real poetic justice to that strangely attractive figure, to his romantic resolve, and the curious legend that clings round his memory . . . the vision is Mr. Johnson's own, and it is surely a noble one. . . . There is, perhaps, equal, or even superior, power in two other and longer poems, Gwynedd and A Cornish Night. . . . Beyond doubt, Mr. Johnson is a careful craftsman of his verses; unless I am mistaken, there is hardly a weak rhyme or a prosy cadence—though there are some few fantastic ones; this is to serve the Muse loyally."—Academy.

"Compared with most of the verse which passes at the present day for poetry, such work as Mr. Johnson's demands due recognition, as work done in the true spirit of art by a serious and skilful artist."—Athenæum.

"Mr. Lionel Johnson's poems have the advantage of a two-fold inspiration. Many of these austere strains could not have been written, if he had not been steeped in the most golden poetry of the Greeks, while, on the other hand, side by side with his mellifluous chaunting, there comes another note, wild, sweet, and unsophisticated—the very bird-note of Celtic poetry. And then again one comes on a song ripe and affluent, as of one who has spoiled the very goldenest harvests of song of cultivated ages. Such is Summer Storm or In England. In a poem like Sancta Silvarum there is stateliness which is as the rolling of organ music. Mr. Johnson's poetry is concerned with lofty things, and is never less than passionately sincere. It is sane, high-minded, and full of felicities."—Illustrated London News.

"In his poems Mr. Lionel Johnson is likely to suffer at the hands of most readers, because he is known to them as critic first and a poet afterwards. They will turn to him for certain ascertained qualities, and will not fail to find them—the academic note, the accent of the inveterate bookman, the classic predilection, and the rest. And if we have any complaint to make of Mr. Johnson, it is that he has, of malice prepense apparently, played too much into the hands of his prejudging critics. For it is when he is most impulsive and original, and least reminiscent and theoretic, that he is most convincing. . . . Winchester and Oxford account for much that is telling and excellent in these poems, and for something, too, no doubt, of any excess they may have of academic qualities. But here Mr. Johnson's range by no means ends. One interesting feature about his work, which remains to be traced, is that, with all his classic sympathies, he has been led on so far in other and Celtic fields. Some of the most distinctive numbers in his book are those treating of Wales and Ireland. . . . Of a part with his love for Ireland, we may consider perhaps the strong Catholic sentiment running through his book; for Mr. Johnson is another in that remarkable band of poets, who have served a Roman Church and an English Muse."—Bookman.

"Whatever may be the imperfections of Mr. Lionel Johnson's verses, he has at least one of the instincts, which true poetry demands. He is not content merely to avoid all that is base, unseemly, and tainted with corruption, but he deliberately seeks and chooses high thoughts and lofty ideals as his place of abiding. He has caught something of Arnold's spirit, without Arnold's scepticism. . . . A critic must be either blind or prejudiced, who fails to recognize the merits of the volume."—Literary World.

"In the course of the year, Mr. Lionel Johnson gave us a first book of poems, stately and austere in form, rich as with ritual and tapestry. . . . To elements in our time it should needs be a balm; to others, a rebuke. . . . Altogether this was one of the ripest of first books. No lover of poetry who reads it will willingly lose sight of Mr. Lionel Johnson."—Weekly Sun.

"His volume is like an old garden, every flower awakening reminiscences of unforbidden, half forgotten, and perhaps quite forgotten poets, the whole invested with an antique dignity, and steeped in the sentiment of antiquity. The passion for the past has seldom, if ever, in our day found so devout an expression."—Star.

"As literary and emotional compositions, his poems are distinctly interesting. His sentiment is a curious mixture of the very modern and the mediæval. . . . The Catholic and the Celtic strains are the strongest."—Sketch.

" . . . Thoughtful, distinctive, and sometimes even lofty poems . . . a rich and thoughtful volume, with an unusual deal of serious work, nobly moulded and fashioned throughout. . . . His volume is very unlike most contemporary poetry. Its loftiness, its aloofness, its sincere and, once in a while, ecstatic Catholicism, its solemn march and manner and pageantry, are in fine relief against the triviality, little worldliness, imitation of all manner of perishable things, noisy decadence worst of all, that are the weariness of so much latter-day pipings and musings. Mr. Johnson's muse is sane, sincere, exalted. . . . A gracious and heartening volume."—Sun.

"Mr. Johnson is a 'builder' of the lofty rhyme, rather than a singer. His work is mainly Latin in its inspiration, and his masters would seem to have been those old English poets most under the influence of Latin models. . . . The most obvious characteristics of Mr. Johnson's verse are dignity and distinction: but beneath these one feels vibrating a passionate poetic impulse, and a grave fascinating music passes from end to end of his volume."—Realm.

"Mr. Johnson has given us an example of a strangely exquisite art: a book of sheer poetry, which is neither nasty, nor silly, nor sentimental; and for this he has our earnest thanks and praise."—Senate.

"Mr. Lionel Johnson's poems stand higher by a long degree than any that the season has yet given us. More will be heard of them, there is no doubt, in seasons that are yet distant. They are cast in a bold and lofty, if occasionally a severe mould; they are both sane and exalted, while redolent of penetrative thought and of great religious issues. The solemn march, the stately pageantry of some, the classic, cloistral, cathedral air and academic glimpses of others, the sincere spirituality, the occasional reverie and wistfulness, the night-poems, and nature-poems that bespeak the Celt, all tend to give the volume an arresting, a remarkable, and sometimes a distinguished air."—New Irish Review.

"He is at once stately and passionate, austere and free. His passion has a sane mood: his fire is white heat. . . . There is in him the delight of the student, but also the open-air joy of a man 'stepping westward' with staff and scrip into the gates of the sunset. . . . There are a good many exquisite examples of the Celtic inspiration in these pages, and the lines dedicated to Mr. John O'Leary are as fine an example as any. The book is full of such battle strains. . . . I do not quote To Morfydd which seems to me the most rapt utterance of the Celtic muse in this book. . . . In quite another mood, I give a last extract from this lofty and beautiful book. Such crashing symphonies as Sancta Silvarum could be written by only one other poet of our time, Mr. Francis Thompson. . . . Mr. Johnson's muse is concerned only with the highest things. Her flight is as of a winged thing, that goes 'higher still and higher,' and has few flutterings near earth. If this poetry errs at all, it is on the side of its height and loftiness—yet none could call it cold."—Irish Daily Independent.

"What distinguishes this verse from the bulk of the minor verse of the day is its high sincerity of thought. And sincerity of thought, when the writer is an artist, as Mr. Johnson is, brings in its train dignity and distinction, which are in almost every line of this volume. Were Mr. Johnson less of an artist, his sincerity of thought might have resulted in a flat and starchy seriousness abhorred of poetry. But here there is the beauty of word and phrase, as well as the earnestness and truth of conception."—United Ireland.

"The reader, taking up each new book of verses as it comes from the press, is apt to cry with a sigh of weariness, was it worth while to print this? is it worth while to read it? In Mr. Johnson's case, we can emphatically answer, yes."—Boston Commonwealth, U.S.A.

"There is at all times a refinement and quietude of expression, which is admirable."—Contemporary Review, U.S.A.

"These melodies are now serene, now spirited and resolute as a trumpet call, again strangely low and sweet, and again devout, austere, and solemn. The songs are songs, and the poems of meditation possess scholarly thought and enviable repose."—Philadelphia Ledger, U.S.A.

"His grasp of rhyme and his ear for cadence are unerring, and no simplest stanza but sings itself like music, as a poem should."—Literary World, U.S.A.

"Even Max Nordau will seek in vain for evidences of 'degeneration' in Mr. Johnson's poetry."—Ave Maria, U.S.A.

"To the ancient foundation of Winchester is dedicated a first book of poems, austere bound in blue paper, which is not unworthy of the school, which trained Otway and Collins. Mr. Lionel Johnson sings in time and tune, and withal there is meaning in the song."—Critic, U.S.A.

"Ses 'Poems' tantôt magnifiques et solennels, sans élaboration, tantôt pensifs et mélancholiques, murmure aérien de la tristesse des choses, où la pensée toujours s'enferme en le rythme attendu, sans affectation ni recherche, ont une pureté de lignes, une forme impeccable et classique. . . . Sans autre commentaire, nous affirmons la très grande valeur du livre de M. Lionel Johnson."—Mercure de France.
